A Boyish Touch, But Pseudorabies Fear Continues On Hog Farms

But not everything has a nice subjective feeling on hog farms when you consider the pseudorabies threat to the nation's pork producers. David's father, Robert Fahnestock, is the producer/coordinator of the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Eradication Program. Fahnestock believes strongly that producers need to work together now to clean up the pseudorabies virus (PRV) problem while they have the opportunity.

"Gene-deleted vaccine gives producers opportunity to clean up a herd at much lower cost than depopulation if all producers work together at the program at the same time," Fahnestock said. "If producers do not work together now to clean up PRV while we have the opportunity, the National Eradication Program could, at some indefinite time in the future, bring some type of depopulation back to clean up any remaining positive herds."

Lancaster County ranks third in the nation for pork production (the first two counties are in Iowa) and the problem has been reported especially in the northern part of the county. But other counties are now working on the problem, too. And overall, the various parties involved in the Pennsylvania program have begun to work more closely together. The groups involved include the Lancaster/Chester Pork Producers Council, the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, area veterinarians, Penn State extension specialists, and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

At the industry's request, Lancaster Farming has been running a series of articles on the problem. The sixth article in the series along with a list of contact persons can be found on Page D-3 of this issue.

In addition, Carolyn Burns, Extension assistant at Penn State, announced this week the availability of a guide for swine producers, entitled "Swine Health and Biosecurity Manual." This reference notebook includes a checklist or calendar of recommended management procedures. Burns said, with the help of a veterinarian, the guide can be customized to meet the needs of any swine operation. The manual provides information from how to control traffic on the farm to a drug use guide to prevent drug residues in the meat — information that every hog farmer can use. The cost is $8. Requests for the manual should be directed to the Publications Distribution Center, Penn State University, 112 Agricultural Adminstration Building, University Park, PA 16802. Or contact your local Extension office.

Penn State To Disperse Colored Breed Dairy Herds

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Penn State University's College of Agriculture is going to disperse its colored breed herds, probably within the next six months.

According to Dr. Stanley Curtis, head of the college's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, the decision to disperse is final, but specific details are yet to be settled of when and how the 109 Guernsey, Brown Swiss, Ayrshire and Jersey cows and heifers will be sold.

Curtis said that a number of problems, aggravated by the severe budgetary restrictions placed on the entire college, have led to the decision to eliminate the small colored breed herds.

But colored breed dairy cattle aren't the only domestic animal breed to be targeted for elimination from the Penn State program.

According to Curtis, the Suffolk sheep are also slated for dispersal. The college is going to keep only its polled Dorset flock, for some of the same reasons.

Curtis said all animal populations currently maintained by Penn State are being scrutinized for need and application to ongoing projects.

The reasons for the elimination of animals are several, but lack of adequate funding from state and federal sources is most immediate. But Curtis said it also involves attempts to increase efficiency at the college.

"We are re-examining our farm operations with regard to every species," Curtis said. "The situation of course is different with each of the species. We have decided to disperse the Suffolk . . . We are looking at each species with the same eye.

"Fiscal constraint is such that we can't continue as we have, and we have to establish priorities and continue with them.

"Those are the realities of state

PDA's Lancaster Stockyard Office To Close

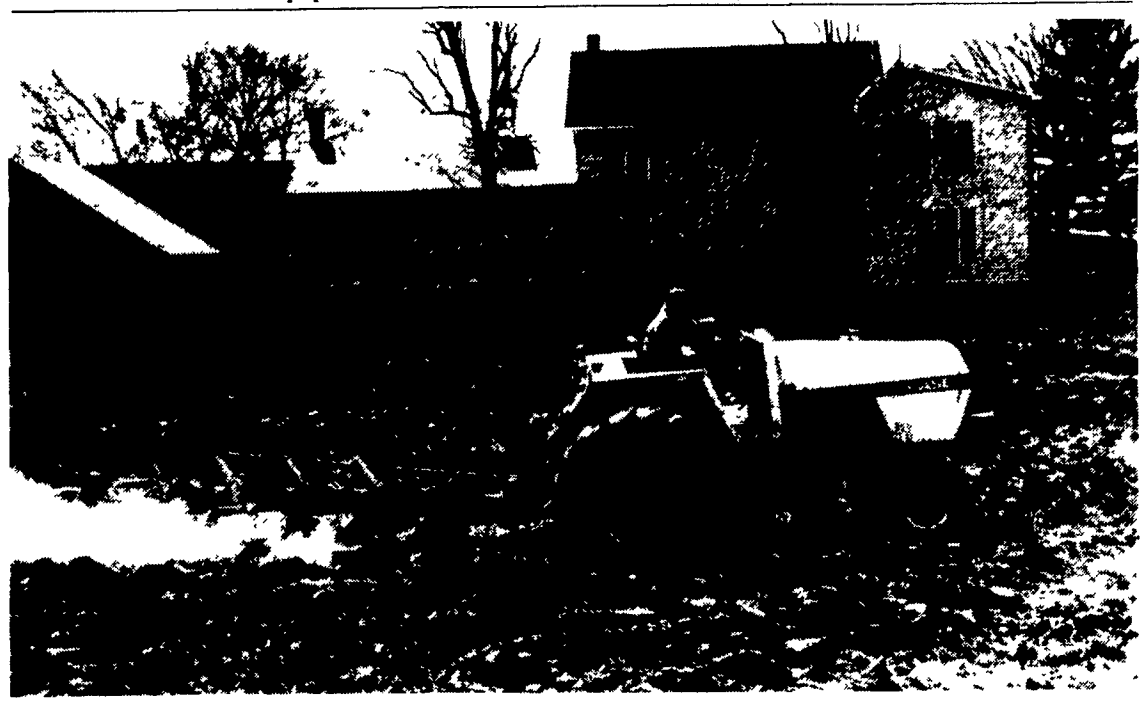
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff today announced that the department's Lancaster Stockyard field office will close on May 17.

The department's Summerdale regional office, near Harrisburg in Cumberland County, will offer livestock certification services previously provided by the Lancaster office, Wolff said.

"The effective control of brucellosis and tuberculosis in Pennsylvania cattle herds has reduced the need for a special office in the Lancaster area," Wolff said. "Meanwhile, computerized records have greatly diminished the need for clerical support at the stockyard, and today, private veterinarians are authorized to certify livestock for shipment."

Wolff said the Lancaster office, a field branch of the department's Summerdale regional office, was established more than 40 years ago because of Lancaster County's large animal population and livestock marketing and shipping activity at the stockyard.

Livestock owners and dealers in the Lancaster area can contact the regional office (717) 787-3400 or the Bureau of Animal Industry's Headquarters (717) 783-5301.



David Martin helps brother-in-law John Nolt get in a little spring plowing. With the warmer than normal spring weather, farmers have taken advantage of the opportunity to get in the fields to work the ground. Everett Newswanger, managing editor, found this plowing picture between Lititz and Manheim in Lancaster County.

N.E. Chicken Parts

April 10, 1991

Trucklot buying interest was mixed and selective. Supplies of boneless skinless breasts were light but adequate for the spotty call. Whole breasts remained in tight supply, particulary line run, despite several buyers resistance to trading at higher prices. Leg items were at least adequate with drums in the closest balance. Wings were well cleared and some buyers noted difficulty in filling needs from several sellers at any price. Giblets were readily available.

Mighty Fine Option

Again this week, an animal activist group was scheduled to take a shot at agriculture with a proposed plan to eliminate dairy and meat products from the four basic food groups. According to the National Milk Producers Federation weekly news letter, the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine set a news conference in Washington, DC, to announce its proposed four food groups to include only whole grains, vegetables, legumes and fruit--with dairy and meat as "options."

"This is another attempt by activists to force a vegetarian diet on the American public," said NMPF Chief Jum Barr. "Dairy and meat products are part of a well-balanced diet and many essential nutrients, including protein and calcium."

Even the American Dietetic Association does not support a diet consisting only of vegetables, fruits, grains and legumes. Of great concern to those who work with diets is the knowledge that even now, many Americans don't meet recommended daily allowances for calcium, iron, zinc and several B vitamins. Lean varieties of meat and dairy products remain the primary source of these nutrients, which are essential to maintaining healthy bones, blood and substances that promote immunity to disease.

When all things are considered, meat and milk remains a mighty fine option when you consider the food groups for a balanced diet.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Stay Off Wet Ground

Don't let spring fever get the better of your good judgment. As you yearn to get into the fields and gardens, remember what you are trying to accomplish. You want seeds to germinate rapidly and seedlings to emerge quickly. The longer it takes for this to happen the greater the opportunity is for disease and insects to attack, weaken or destroy the seed and planting. Follow weather predictions closely and delay planting until soil moisture and temperature conditions are favorable for good germination, and until the risk of frost injury has passed. To prevent soil compaction and surface crusting, don't work soils when they are too wet.

To Renovate Old Pastures

Are your pastures old and unproductive? Are you thinking about tearing them up and reseeding them? Wait! According to Glenn Shirk, Extension Dairy Agent, there may be a better alternative.

Chances are, the pasture already contains seeds of a variety of pasture grasses and clovers. All they need is a little bit of encouragement and an opportunity to grow. They may respond to liming, fertilizing, aeration, rotational grazing and mowing. This is cheaper than complete renovation and there is less risk of seeding failures and erosion.

The best time to seed pastures is around early September when it is cooler and the new stands are not stressed by hot, dry summer conditions. Many of the annual weeds that emerge will be killed by frost before they become a serious competition.

If the pastures do not respond to spring liming and fertilizing, they can be reseeded in September.

To Understand Persistent Weed Problems

Just how persistent do we have to be in order to control weed problems? Well, the answer to this question comes from weed scientists who ran germination tests on weed seeds.

They report that 29% of Johnsongrass seed germinated after being buried for 3 years; morning glory 74% after 5 years; pigweed 66% after 40 years and dock 52% after being buried 50 years. They further reported that 51 of 107 species tested still have live seeds after 20 years.

The reason these seeds remain in the soil for such a long period without sprouting is apparently related to environmental conditions. According to weed experts, some seeds need just the right combination of moisture, temperature, and nutrients before they will germinate. This explains why we may suddenly be faced with a weed problem we thought was cured several years ago.

To Prepare For Ryelage Harvest

Winter grains are growing rapidly and before we know it ryelage harvesting time will be upon us. When that time comes, you want to be ready to roll with the harvester because you have so few days in which to harvest the crop at the precise time for top quality feed. If you miss these few days due to inclement weather or poor timing, quality declines very rapidly! Small grains will normally produce up to twice as much TDN per acre when harvested for silage as compared to the same crop harvested as grain. The boot stage of maturity is best.

Line up your harvester now, get the silo ready and as the harvest time approaches, keep a close watch on the fields and be ready to roll at a moment's notice when the weather breaks.

AN OPEN LETTER:
To Those Who Think Defeat Of The Leahy Bill Was Good

To those who felt the defeat of the Leahy bill was good for dairy farmers-- you are right that Senator Leahy's amendment had its shortcomings.

But you are wrong — or perhaps do not fully understand the issue — if you believe the bill was not beneficial for dairy farmers, whether in Pennsylvania, New York or any other part of the country.

Here's why:

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHO'S GOT THE GIFT?

April 14, 1991

Background Scripture: I Corinthians 12:1-26.

Devotional Reading: Romans 12:1-8.

Whenever I get even slightly starry-eyed about the pristine purity of the early church, I turn to Paul's first letter to the Corinthians to bring myself back to earth. Here was a congregation that faced virtually every problem known to churches today — and then some!

Just as I Cor. 11 was a response to a particular problem the Corinthians were having with their church suppers, so I Cor. 12 is addressed to another serious problem. The end result is more division in the church, but this time the source of the problem is spiritual gifts. Spiritual gifts are supposed to be an asset to the church, but, of course, any asset can be turned into a liability.

That's what was happening in Corinth. It would appear that certain Corinthians were having ecstatic experiences during worship, probably glossalalia or speaking in tongues. (Something of a misnomer since these outbursts were usually unintelligible and not known tongues or languages, quite unlike what happened on the Day of Pentecost.) There is good reason to believe that these ecstatic tendencies were patterned after, perhaps even borrowed from the wildly emotional and orgiastic practices in certain pagan cults.

DISRUPTIVE & DIVISIVE

The problem for the church was two-fold. For one thing, these bouts of ecstasy disrupted the worship services. Two people can pray in different ways in silence without disturbing each other. But let one become ecstatic and the other will have a hard time with his or her own devotion.

The second problem was the divisiveness that resulted. Paul never quite uses the word "pride" in this passage, but he at least implies it. Behind his words we can hear someone boast, "I'm more charismatic than you are!" Those who indulged in these ecstatic practices were obviously claiming them as signs of the Holy Spirit working in them. Because these practices were rather spectacular, some people were looking to these "gifted" people for leadership.

What Paul is concerned to do in this chapter is first to challenge this premise that ecstatic Christians are more gifted and valuable than others. Both Paul and his readers know what he is re- ferring to when he says "no one speaking by the Spirit of God ever says 'Jesus be cursed'!", but we don't know what this is about. But Paul is reminding the Corinthians that sheer ecstasy alone is not evidence of the Holy Spirit. Some of their pagan neighbors were ecstatic — perhaps it was one of these who said "Jesus be cursed" — and they certainly didn't have the Holy Spirit.

THE COMMON GOOD

There is nothing wrong with ecstasy per se, but ecstasy alone is not a spiritual gift from God. What makes it charismatic, a true gift from God is if it contributes to "the common good" (12:7). That is the acid test for all of God's spiritual gifts. Ecstasy or any other state that does not contribute to the common good is not of the Holy Spirit. And obviously, ecstatic utterances that are harmful to the common good, that generate spiritual pride and are divisive to the church are not of the Holy Spirit either.

Only Farm Credit Has Loan Officers Who Were Trained In The Field.

While you were growing up on the farm going to 4-H, FFA, maybe even AG school, do you know what your Farm Credit loan officer was doing?

Same thing.

Not many bankers can say that.

True, they can make loans nine ways to Sunday. But, now your Farm Credit loan officer can, too. Over the last few years our people have gone through extensive training at making every kind of farm loan imaginable. Now a Farm Credit loan officer can give you the lowdown on rates, options and creative financing as well as any city banker can.

And around here, our Farm Credit loan officers have the power of approval that's equal to most bank presidents.

So the next time you need to get a farm loan, think about this for just a moment.

Then let one of our Farm Credit loan officers prove to you what we've been saying all along.

That bankers can't be farmers.

But farmers can be bankers.

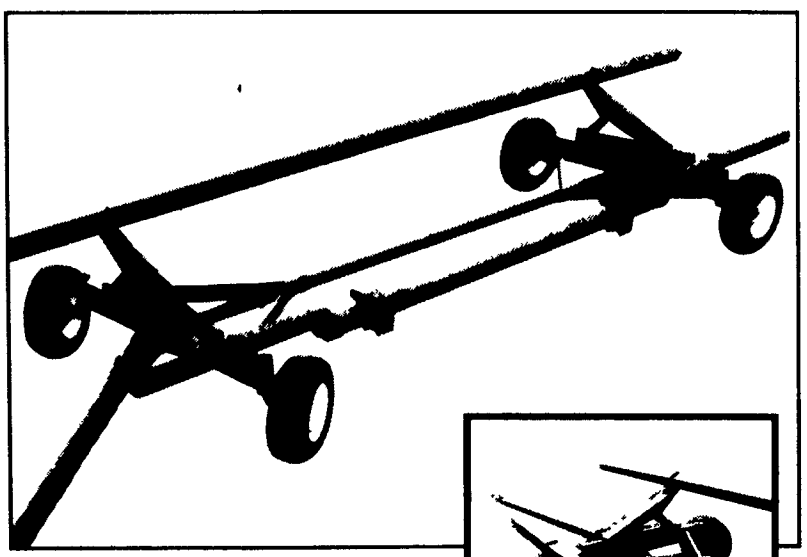
Here's all the support you need to make header handling easy



Both upper and lower bars are adjustable for maximum clearance

With an Unverferth header transport carrying your combine head or grain platform, moving and storing hassles disappear.

Unverferth header transports are specially engineered running gears constructed of exceptionally strong 3½" steel tubing. An extendible tongue and automotive-type 180° steering make hook-up and maneuvering quick and easy.

Adjustable upper and lower support bars provide necessary clearance and allow the Unverferth header transport to custom fit your header. This design distributes weight evenly for safe, true trailing.

Find out what a difference a little support can make. See your Unverferth dealer today. Or contact us.

Pork Producers Consider An Alternative

Traditional soybean processing methods involve chemical or mechanical removal of the oil from the seed followed by heating of the remaining meal.

Gov. Casey Proclaims Grange Week

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — More than 350,000 national Grange members will celebrate Grange Week April 21-27. In recognition of this event and the Pennsylvania State Grange, Gov. Robert P. Casey has proclaimed the week of April 21-27 Pennsylvania Grange Week.

"Pennsylvania's agricultural tradition has stretched back over 300 years," Gov. Casey said. "Even today, in our post-industrial era, Pennsylvania has the largest rural population of any state in the nation and agriculture remains our commonwealth's number one industry.

"For nearly 120 years, the Pennsylvania State Grange has been dedicated to preserving our agricultural and rural heritage," he said.

Gov. Casey recognized the grange's role as an organized voice for rural families seeking equality in the legislative process. The 505 Granges throughout Pennsylvania act as centers for rural and agricultural interests, Gov. Casey said.

"I urge all citizens to recognize the many achievements and contributions to our Commonwealth made by the Pennsylvania State Grange and its members," Gov. Casey said.

The Pennsylvania State Grange will officially celebrate Grange Week on Monday, April 22, at the Holiday Inn, Grantville. The day will be filled with workshops and speakers on topics such as wetland regulations, dairy issues, and integrated pest management. Workshops will be followed by a social hour at 5 p.m. aand dinner at 6 p.m. Tickets are $11 and can be purchased by contacting the Pennsylvania State Grange Office at (717) 234-5001.

Gov. Casey signs the Grange Week Proclamation. From left, top row, Dina Zug, Pa. Grange Secretary; William Buffington, Pa. Grange Overseer (vice president); Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director; Boyd Wolff, secretary agriculture; Anna May Nauss, Pa. Grange treasurer. Bottom row, William Ringler, Pa. Grange Master (president); Gov. Robert P. Casey and Mildred Ringler, Pa. Grange first lady.

Repairs To Farmland Net Recognition For Brothers

LENHARTSVILLE (Berks Co.) — It certainly was rough going in the past. Holes in the ground. Mud trenches. It was dangerous going over the hilly fields if you were tilling or harvesting.

But thanks in part to conservation efforts — installing tiling systems, contour strips, and grass waterways — farming has become easier and more profitable for the Kehl Brothers (Larry and Lloyd) in the rolling hills of northern Berks Co.

The Kehls were recognized for their conservation efforts by the Berks Co. Soil Conservation District at a banquet Monday night.

Larry Kehl spoke about the difficulties of farming a great deal of marginal land, and the work in making the farmland more profitable.

Dairy farm

The Kehls operate a 550-acre (tillable) dairy farm in three locations — one near Virginville, another in Lenhartsville, and another near Moselem Springs. They raise 85 (milking) head of Holstein cows, including 80 replacement young stock.

Crops grown include corn (200 acres), about 200 acres of hay, and 100 combined acres of oats and wheat. They milk from a free stall through a milking pipeline.

The brothers went into a partnership — Kehl Bros., Inc. — after they purchased the farm in 1985. They grew up in farming, ever since their father purchased his first farm in Moselem Springs in 1949.

Since then, the family has been involved with conservation through the district. "My dad always signed up for programs over the years, for as long as I can remember," said Kehl. "It was soon after that, when there was a program, sometimes he went with it, some years he didn't."

Contour strips

In 1975, the Kehls built a lagoon to contain milk house waste. In 1981, the Kehls built a manure pit, using clay containment around a concrete base. Soon after that, the family installed tiles and placed more contour strips on the farmland.

Three years ago, said Kehl, the business went into a long-term agreement with one of the other farms. They removed fence rows in the smaller fields and installed contour strips with grass waterways. At the farm in Lenhartsville, a grass waterway was leveled and planted in August of last year.

Beforehand, he said, "you couldn't really get around much. You had to watch that you didn't get stuck here and there."

Last week, the district installed flags to mark the paths for an additional 50 acres of contour strips in Lenhartsville.

300 acres

Within the last seven years, approximately 300 acres of contour strips were installed on the entire farming operation.

"It just helps in the crop rotation," said Kehl. "That was my main concern. We put tiles in the area

HOW TO AVOID GETTING BLACK...

Get Ready To Plant Corn

Robert E. Leiby
David L. Dunbar-Lehigh Co. Extension Office

Ideal planting time is only a few days long. In most years, each day's delay past this period reduces yields up to one bushel per acre per day.

Normally, corn can be safely planted 10 to 14 days before the average date of the last killing frost. In the Allentown/Bethlehem area, there is a 50 percent chance of frost on April 14. That percentage drops to 10 percent by April 28.

In most of southeast Pennsylvania (maturity zone 4), the theoretical planting period is April 15 through May 1, our range of growing degree days (GDDs) is 2,950 to 3,175, and our growing season may vary from 121 to 130 days.

GDDs represent a daily accumulation of heat (sun energy) for crop growth. Corn does not grow when temperatures are below 50 degrees F., and temperatures above 86 degrees F. do not increase plant grow rate. Most seed-corn businesses include GDD ratings on their seed tags or in their hybrid descriptions. The hybrid GDD ratings are detemmined from planting to black layer formation.

An estimate of GDDs for a farm can be determined from published GDD requirements of hybrids that are known to mature consistently on that farm.

Hybrids with similar GDD ratings may vary in moisture content at harvest because of different dry-down rates following physiological maturity.

Ideally, soil temperatures should be 50 degrees F. or above, and the five-day extended weather forecast should indicate continued wamm, or warmer, conditions. However, soil physical conditions for good seed coverage are equally important in deciding to plant.

When planting is delayed past the optimum dates or if a crop needs to be replanted, it may be necessary to switch hybrid maturities. An important factor is to determine the approximate number of GDDs left in the season before a killing frost in your area. For corn grown for grain, use only hybrids that require fewer than that amount of GDDs to mature.

For silage corn, full season hybrids for your area can still be planted and can yield more than shorter season hybrids. If soils on these late planted fields are poorly drained, though, earlier hybrids are probably justified for silage also, since they will help avoid the risk of wet soils at harvest.

More corn planting guidelines are available in the "1991-1992 Penn State Agronomy Guide," available at all county Extension offices at a cost of $6.

Pork Producers Meetings

Clyde Myers, Penn State Extension agent for Berks County, will discuss animal welfare considerations as they relate to the swine industry at 8 p.m., Wednesday, April 17 at the Kempton Hotel, Kempton. This public meeting is being sponsored by the Eastern Pennsylvania Pork Producers. No reservations are needed.

Mark Your Calendar For Ag Progress Days

"Ag Science Touches Your Life" is the theme of Penn State's 1991 Ag Progress Days.

The event will focus on the many ways, both obvious and unexpected, that the agricultural sciences affect our daily lives.

Ag Progress Days annually attracts tens of thousands of visitors to Penn State'ss 1,500-acre Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center.

so we could put the grass waterways and more strips in, instead of having a gutter there. We flattened it out."

Kehl said the work is proving beneficial to the farm. Because of the contour strips and the application of the liquid manure on a regular basis, both farms have seen increased profitability.

"I feel that in the limestone farm there at Moselem Springs, we can make twice as much money per acre on the crops than up here," said Kehl. "Up here, you get 100 bushels to the acre, that's good. Down there, you can get 150, and you do the same stuff. Last year was pretty good because it was good all over. We had well over 100 bushels. If we average 100, we're well satisfied."

Conduct soil tests

The Kehls conduct soil tests every year. Some fields have enough nitrogen remaining from previous manure applications, and require only lime. Others require starter fertilizer, and some require additional manure. "Sometimes it's funny," said Kehl. "You think it takes lime, and it doesn't. But we usually try to lime the fields with the oats. Most years we don't even use a starter. It all depends on the year. If (the soil test) shows we need it, then we put it on."

A lot of the farmland near Lenhartsville is marginal, and many farmers are going out of farming. "We have some guys around here that are just giving up," he said.

The Kehls milk at 6 a.m. and again at 5 p.m. Larry Kehl enjoys farming and the brothers share the chores. "We usually rotate — we don't have any particular schedule. We usually just get it done.

"I think it would get too boring if you do the same thing all the time," he said.

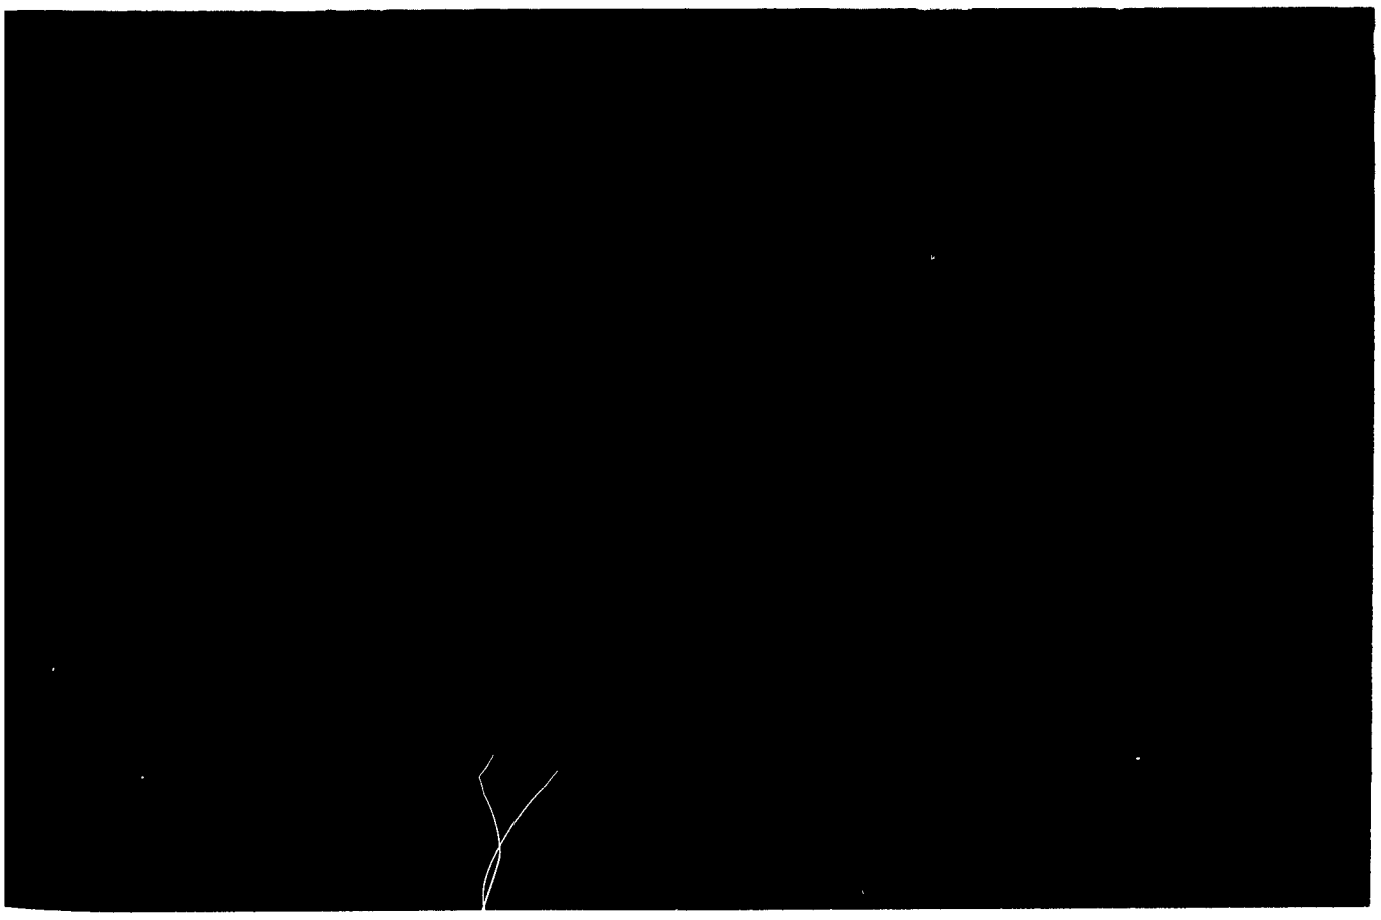
AND BLUE.



Black shank and blue mold are two of the biggest enemies a leaf of burley or flue-cured can have. And on a cost-per-acre basis, nothing protects tobacco plants from these diseases like Ridomil®

Just one application (at labelled rates) in the field before transplanting fights black shank, blue mold and Pythium all season long.

Ridomil stops disease on contact in the soil. Then its systemic action allows it to be absorbed into the plant through the roots, keeping it safe from disease. You get a healthier plant, higher quality tobacco.

So this season, use Ridomil. Before a few of tobacco's biggest enemies beat your bottom line black and blue.

and federal shortfalls in operating budgets."

However, Curtis said it isn't just PSU's college of agriculture which is taking hard cuts. He said it is effecting reductions in operations across the university.

Dairy animals came under hard scrutiny because of an expansion and rennovation of the dairy production facilities at Penn State. Construction is to tentatively begin this summer.

In late December, members of the Department of Dairy and Animal Science met on campus to discuss breed policy at the dairy production center.

At the meeting, it was decided to abandon the efforts at keeping the small, representative colored breed herds, and to focus efforts at strengthening the Holstein herd to a level required for minimum research needs.

On Feb. 1, the group met again to discuss methods of dispersal. There are no specific plans yet. The college is working in cooperation with the breed organizations in dispersing the different breeds, rather than selling them all in one major public sale.

On Feb. 15 letters were mailed to each breed organization to inform representatives of the organizations of the actions intended by the department. Included with the letters was a decision paper.

According to the decision paper, there are four major reasons for getting rid of the colored breeds — research would improve because of more animals which can be included in an experiment; the new facilities would better serve one breed; the existing colored breed herds offer negligible teaching opportunity for students; more income would be realized from milk and meat sales with a Holstein only herd.

As of Dec. 18, the herd inventory was:

- Holsteins — a total of 273, with 60 percent of those registered, comprised of 139 cows and 134 heifers. There are also 18 bulls being used in a study.

The November 1990 rolling herd average was 19,661 pounds of milk, 3.8 percent fat, 3.1 percent protein.

- Jerseys — a total of 29, split between 14 cows and 15 heifers. The rolling herd average was 13,661 pounds of milk, 4.7 percent fat, 3.7 percent protein.
- Guernseys — a total of 20, with 9 cows and 11 heifers. The rolling herd average were 12,779 pounds of milk, 4.8 percent fat, 3.3 percent protein.
- Ayrshires — a total of 39, with 20 cows and 19 heifers. The rolling herd averages were 14,327 pounds milk, 4.1 percent fat, 3.2 percent protein.
- Brown Swiss — a total of 21, with 12 cows and 9 heifers. The rolling herd averages were 16,370 pounds of milk, 4.2 percent fat, 3.4 percent protein.

The different breed associations are currently reviewing pedigrees of the animals, Curtis said.

"We've gotten in touch with the state breed organizations and now are discussing specific dispersal. It will probably be a different way within each of the breeds," Curtis said. "I expect we will be consigning to sales in the spring and winter."

He said the dispersal will be done, "probably — a rough estimate — within the next six months, depending on stage of pregnancy and stage of lactation."

He said there has also been some interest expressed in buying the animals as a small herd.

Specific information on sales should be either coming from breed associations or through later announcements by Penn State.

According to Curtis, the university's decision to keep Holsteins and not one of the other breeds was also difficult to make.

Arguments in support of other breeds can be made, especially for the Jersey breed, which, in the eyes of some, presents the most likely choice as the breed of the future.

But while Curtis said he doesn't deny the advantages to a Jersey herd — smaller animal size size, high food value to its milk, less land area needed, less manure to handle, less feed, water and smaller housing needs — the reasons for staying with a Holstein herd are even stronger.

He said the fact that 95.5 percent of the cows in Pennsylvania that are on test are Holsteins, the wide genetic diversity of the breed, and the direct application of research findings to industry practices makes the Holstein the most logical breed for the university.

"The fact is, the majority of cows milked are Holsteins," Curtis said. "The research therefore is on Holsteins, if it pertains to the dairy industry.

"The discussions went around the table. Most of the things we study . . . the results we derive from Holsteins can be applied to all breeds. That is not to say that there aren't some characteristics particular to Jerseys, but in this funding climate, we can't afford to accommodate that work.

"It's also so that the huge genetic base that the Holstein has gives it a lot of flexibility and range into what it can develop," he said.

According to Curtis there was no intention on the part of the university to slight any breed. The decisions were not made based on anyone's personal preferences, and certainly not through any private influences — they were made totally on the basis of hard facts.

Furthermore, although profit is not a concern of the college, the fact that the Holsteins are better at paying for themselves adds to the attraction of keeping them at the college.

According to the decision paper, by eliminating the colored breeds and building the Holstein milking herd to 200, the college would realize an additional $30,000 income a year to offset expenses.

Curtis said that amount of additional income was estimated based on the rolling herd averages among the breeds now and component pricing compared against Holsteins.

And now with low milk prices, the college has been hurt hard.

Curtis said budget estimates made last year were that the college's dairy production and animals sales would bring in $503,000.

"Through Jan. 12 (the college's fiscal year is from July 1 to June 30), income to the dairy center, in milk and animals sold, was $284,800.

" . . . because of the milk price decrease, we're going to have a shortfall of $21,000. We're used to ups and down in milk and cattle, but what is really making us reassess is that our base operating budget is being reduced, and that's so for every deparmtent in college."

Curtis did not rule out the possibility of the university someday starting up another herd of a colored breed, but it won't happen soon. He said the chances of that happening within the next five years or so are small.

The specifics of when the ground is to be broken for the new and renovated 200 freestall facility have not been made known yet.

But when it is completed, the goal is to have a herd capable of being used in large enough science trials to generate at least enough data to generate reasonably reliable results.

"For all practical purposes, the colored breeds were not available for general science experimentation," he said.

However, Curtis said that when the decision was made, "Nobody in the room was happy."

Colored Breed Associations Not Sure About Dispersal

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Members of the various dairy cattle colored breed associations had not formed a consensus of opinion about the planned herd dispersals at Penn State University, according to a telephone survey this week.

Letters announcing the intended dispersal and a position paper explaining the reasons were mailed to each of the associations' secretaries mid-February.

However, according to several contacted, many members of the different breed associations were not yet informed of the dispersal.

Those unable to be reached included the Guernsey Breeders Association officials. That organization is currently holding its 60th Annual Meeting in Chambersburg.

Brenda Daubert, secretary of the state Brown Swiss Association, said she received the letter and position paper, but hadn't informed the membership of the intent to sell the Penn State herds.

She said the only way to get the word out to members is through publications or at organizational functions. The next association function is a summer picnic on June 9. Their annual meeting is in October and the next consignment sale is in September at the All American.

However, Daubert, who with her husband Dean milks about 60

PSU Defines Position On Breeds At Dairy Research, Education Center

The decision has been made to sell the colored breeds from the Penn State University Dairy Research and Education Center. This was not an easy decision and was made with careful and thorough deliberations by faculty and staff. The status and future of the colored breeds has been periodically discussed and evaluated for the past 10 or more years. The decision to sell the colored breeds and increase the number of Holsteins was based on the following reasons:

1. Research. Although the number of milking Holsteins average about 120, there have frequently been inadequate members to do statistically valid and meaningful research. The information and knowledge gained from the improved research capabilities with more animals of one breed will benefit all of the dairy industry regardless of the breed of cattle.

Many large scale trials require 40-60 cows of a similar lactation, a number that has often been difficult to obtain, even with 120 milking cows. For many research trials, it is imperative that a large number of cows be used to provide good information that can be directly applied to the dairy farms of Pennsylvania.

We have lost out on some research grants because of inadequate numbers of Holstein cows in similar stages of lactation. With several researchers needing lactating cows from the farm, the competition and lack of adequate numbers of Holsteins has dictated that some research studies are not conducted.

We have not had adequate numbers of any of the colored breeds to use for most research trials. We have tried to maintain 12 to 20 milking age cows of each fo the four colored breeds, but rarely have even 8 to 10 cows of any breed that are in a similar stage of lactation to consider using on a research trial.

2. New Facilities. We are in the final stages of planning the new/renovated Penn State Dairy facility. It is possible that ground will be broken during the summer of 1991.

We have been concerned for some time about "mixing" of breeds in the new cow and replacement free stall facilities. The housing facilities and parlor have been designed for essentially one size of cattle — Holsteins. Therefore, this seems like a logical time to make the decision to sell the colored breeds. Having one breed should help our management with the new facility.

3. Teaching and Quality of Cattle. We have long justified the retention of the colored breeds because of their use in teaching and judging activities. With the numbers and quality in some of the breeds, we question how good a job we do in education.

Although we made a decision several years ago to maintain 12 to 15 head of high quality milking age cows of each of the colored breeds and have purchased cattle on two different occassions in an attempt to improve quality, we have difficulty in maintaining the quality that all of us would desire.

The fact that we had one calendar year with all bull calves in one of the breeds helps illustrate the problem and our frustrations.

We often have not had good judging classes (of animals) for the 4-H and FFA judging contests held on the Penn State campus. With 12 to 15 milking head, it is often nearly impossible to have a high quality class with cows in a similar stage of lactation.

Frankly, we are embarrassed as are many of our dairymen with the classes that we have sometimes had to use. No one learns with average quality animals.

With selling of the colored breeds, we will need to ask for the cooperation from many dairymen to open up heir herds for our students for the training of judging teams.

4. Economics. Although our major goal is research and education (resident and extension education), we still need to prudently manage our operation to maximize income.

With the current production levels and milk prices, replacing the colored breeds with Holsteins will increase our income at least $30,000 per year.

As was mentioned in the introduction, this was not a hastily made decision, but one that has required considerable thought and discussion.

We believe it is important to inform you of this decision and the reasons for the decision.

Colored Breed Associations

Brown Swiss near Lock Haven, near State College, said she doesn't like the fact that the animals are being sold.

"We don't think it's really fair. It's like Dean says, they say in the letter they'll make more money, which we don't think is necessarily true. We think they should keep it all, if it's going to be for a college," she said.

However, Daubert said she acknowledged that the decision was final. "I guess there are good points either way," she said.

In the position paper, Penn State officials ask the colored breed associations to open up their herds for students so that they have an opportunity to see the different breeds.

The Dauberts, who moved close to Penn State 2 years ago, have acted as host to students both years. Brenda said they intend to continue.

Ayrshire Association President John Rodgers could not be reached for comment. Nor could David Norman, secretary-treasurer of the Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club.

However, Daubert said Norman called them and said he wasn't pleased with the decision. Several other members of the Jersey association have made similar statements.

Leonard Queitzsch, president of the Brown Swiss Association had yet to see the letter or position paper when contacted this week. He said he had heard rumors.

With hearing the news, Queitzsch, who had several Guernseys 10 years ago, said he was upset. However, he said it'll be something that's got to be lived with.

"Of course we'd like to see Swiss up there. But I don't think one breed is better than another. I think that a good cow's a good cow."

The Holstein Association is run a little differently than the other state organizations which depend on volunteers and are much smaller in comparison.

William Nichol, executive secretary of the association said, "The Pennsylvania Holstein Association is anxious to work with the Department of Dairy and Animal Science in adding Holsteins to the present herd and we're looking forward to this opportunity. We're confident that the Holstein breeders in Pennsylvania will be supportive of their (PSU) efforts."

Nichol also said he was sorry the decision had to be made to disperse the colored breeds from Penn State.

"We regret the decision had to be made to go this route to a one-breed herd to participate in research. But we're confident that any research would be helpful to the total dairy industry," Nichol said.

"We think it's important for Penn State to be working toward being number one in research. Whatever it takes on their part to reach this goal, the entire dairy industry should be supportive."

Holstein Spring Sale Goes Well

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The annual Spring Sale by the Pennsylvania Holstein Association went well, according to officials. The event was held April 6 in the Ag Arena at Penn State University.

According to Kenneth Raney, director of membership service, there were about 45 more head sold this year than were sold last year. "Though the average price was down, we're real pleased with the sale. We had a lot of new buyers; a lot of new interest. I felt we had a pretty good sale."

In addition to being sold to dairymen in Pennsylvania, animals were purchased by interests in Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Canada, and Oklahoma.

The top seller of the sale was a young Micheal daughter, Miss Shey-Land Ashley-ET, consigned by George and Paul Sheypuk, of Jermyn. Born Sept. 28, 1990, her dam is Shey-Land Nede Apropos-ET, a VG87 at 3 years, 5 months. She had a 1-11 DHI record on 365 days of 23,580 pounds milk, 1,062 fat and 870 protein.

She was purchased by Ben and Keith Carson of Jersey Shore for $6,100.

Late Winter Reproductive Problems

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Cows are not showing strong heats. Conception rate is declining. What's the problem?

These are comments often heard in late winter. Several factors could be involved.

Nutrition: By this time of year the herd has been fed stored forage for six months or so. The content of vitamins A, E and B-carotene decreases markedly during storage. Blood levels of these vitamins may be marginal in some herds. It is important that adequate, but not excessive, vitamin supplementation occur during this season of the year. Another situation may be that rations are formulated based on forage tests conducted last fall and thus energy and protein intakes may be limiting because a major change in forage quality was not considered. Routine forage testing and ration formulation are critical to maintaining maximum production and optimal reproductive performance. Anemia can be related to poor expression of heat. In addition to low intake of iron, deficiencies of protein, selenium, vitamin E, cobalt, and copper can cause anemia. Parasitism may also be involved.

Management: Some farmers are reluctant to turn cows out of stanchions for heat detection during the cold, wet weather. Others may turn cows out, but fail to properly observe for estrus because conditions are too nasty. Slippery footing or feet and leg problems also hinder the expression of heat. Cows continue to cycle but efficiency and accuracy of heat detection decline during the winter. Under these conditions conception rate may be lower because cattle are inseminated based on secondary signs of heat, and the timeliness of insemination is less than desirable.

Precautions must be taken to protect semen from cold shock when handling semen during the cooler months of the year. Uterine infections may become a problem in herds confined in poorly ventilated, crowded barns or when cows are forced to calve in stanchions or wet, unsanitary maternity pens.

These are a few potential problem areas that may affect reproduction particularly during late winter. Oftentimes several of these factors combined result in depressed fertility.

More Teat Sores During Winter

C.M. Burns
Vet Sci Ext Assistant

Dairy producers may notice more sores or lesions on the udders and teats of their cattle during the winter months. Some reasons for these problems are:

Chapped Skin is probably the most common skin irritation seen at this time. If is often caused by the washing of teats and the action of the milking machine, along with teat dips, bedding materials, and other environmental conditions during these colder months. The cracked skin can lead to easy colonization of Staph aureus. Thus increasing the incidence of S. aureus mastitis. The rough skin can also easily be invaded by viral organisms which can cause other problems.

Pseudocowpox is a pox virus common with cattle. Only a few cattle in a herd have sores at any one time which take long periods of time to heal. Therefore the rate of spread throughout the herd is slow. Because cattle develop little immunity to pseudocowpox, a cow can have sores form on their teats several times during the winter.

Pseudocowpox is characterized by localized swelling and a pustule which ruptures within 48

Cooperatives Must Be A Resource For Members

SYRACUSE, N.Y.— Cooperatives can and should be an important resource for increasing the on-farm profitability of their individual members, said Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford at the Annual Germania Dairy Automation Equipment Show held in Fresno, CA, recently.

During his presentation, "Your Cooperative: An Untapped Resource," Rutherford told the audience of dairy farmers that cooperatives have to be progressive in their approach to aiding their farmer members. He added that cooperatives should be a resource to members as they seek to adequately capitalize their farms, and provide services and programs that reduce costs and enhance productivity.

"I believe cooperatives are an untapped resource in many of these areas. What I mean is twofold. 1) They have not realized their full potential for providing programs and services that impact members' bottom lines. 2) They are untapped because, for a number of reasons, members have not demanded resources that can help them, or have not taken advantage of all that is being offered to them," said Rutherford.

"At our cooperative, we view our role to be an extension of our members' farms, both symbolically and literally," Rutherford said. "As our dairy farmer-members look to the 1990s, and indeed the next century, we want them to know that they have a sturdy and reliable partner in Dairylea -- a partner that is committed to enhancing the profitability of each member's dairy operation."

According to Rutherford, Dairylea has looked at on-farm profitability from all sides by continually examining its members' needs. "In recent years, we at Dairylea have begun developing capital lending arrangements, financial services, farm m ment resources, and an array .. benefit options aimed at increasing our members' profitability goals," he said.

Among the biggest challenges facing farmers today is securing capital for profitability projects. On this topic, Rutherford discussed several capital lending arrangements available to Dairylea members including profitability and energy loan programs.

Rutherford continued by touching upon several financial resources provided for Dairylea members. They include: direct deposit of milkchecks, deferred payments, advanced payments, and flexible payment options.

On the subject of farm management Rutherford said, "We are committed to communicating with members about market information, operational methodologies, and financial techniques that can help them manage their farm businesses better. The most potential for increasing productivity and profitability, and the long-term viability of our member farms, can occur right on the farm."

Farm management resources available for Dairylea members include: providing informational programs on farm management topics; sponsoring PRO-DAIRY, a management skills curriculum developed by Cornell University; and offering a financial incentive for members to try Dairy Herd Improvement Association programs. Dairylea also has farm resource specialists who go to members' farms for one-on-one consultations to address concerns with farm management, milk production, quality issues and cost control.

Additionally, Dairylea has developed a program that allows members with on-farm computers, a private phone line, modem and software, to access information on state-wide feed prices, milk price projections, regional weather, and other industry information. DEBB -- Dairylea's Electronic Bulletin Board -- is a one-stop information source for dairy farm managers that can help them make better informed and cost-effective farming decisions.

Rutherford also discussed an array of benefit options aimed at increasing farmer members' profitability goals. They include: health and dental insurance, pre-tax member pension and medical expense reimbursement plans, and flexible benefit packages.

Rutherford said that cooperatives must continue to help members by looking for ways to improve cash flow and reduce cost. "Your cooperative can be and should be a resource in helping your day-to-day operations."

hours. An elevated scab will develop at this site. After 7 to 10 days, this scab will fall off leaving a horseshoe-shaped ring of small scabs. Pseudocowpox infections take 5 to 6 weeks to heal. Care should be taken when milking and/or treating cattle with pseudocowpox. This virus can be transmitted to the milker's hands, forming sores known as milkers' nodules.

Warts are known by most dairy producers and can grow on any part of the body. Several different strains of virus have been identified as causing warts, each with its own specific characteristics. Warts are common in younger cattle. They generally cause little harm and heal spontaneously. When warts grow on the teats of lactating cattle, they often interfere with milking.

PFA Defines Legislative Positions

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State legislators should have a clearer understanding of what their agricultural constituents want them to do about issues in the forefront of Harrisburg politics.

About 350 members of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association (PFA) met in Harrisburg Monday at the Hilton Hotel for their annual state legislative conference.

The conference is held in order to allow members to visit with representatives to discuss issues and find out positions those representatives intend to take or maintain.

The meeting also serves to provide more detail on, and remind members of, PFA policy on political issues.

Among those issues of current concern are wetlands protection, mandatory deposits on beverage cans and bottles, and the state budget.

Legislators and members finished the day-long conference with a banquet. Keith Eckel, PFA president and national representative of PFA, was the key speaker.

According to Keith Eckel, PFA president and national representative, there are several issues which the state legislators need to address properly.

The proposed budget allocations of state general funds (those monies raised through taxes) is unjust and unfair toward agriculture, according to Eckel.

Eckel said the PFA position is that a 6-percent cut across the board cut for the entire state government would seem fair.

"PFA has for a long period often endorsed fiscal responsibility. We support the need for a balanced budget and support curtailing spending rather than increasing taxes," Eckel said.

He said Gov. Casey said a 6-percent cut was needed to balance the budget. However, Eckel said the proposed percentage of cut to government support services for the agricultural industry far exceeds 6 percent.

"It's a disproportionate share. We're willing to accept cuts in line with 6 percent," he said. "We believe the reductions in spending should be across the board and should not and cannot be disproportionately shared by the agricultural community."

As an example of the "disproportionate" cuts to agricultural support services, Eckel told the senators and representatives about the 100-percent cut in state funding of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board and the 45-percent cut in base operating support to the University of Pennsylvania veterinary school and New Bolton research center.

Eckel also talked about potential wetlands legislation. He said legislators must include several items in proposed legislation before it will be acceptable to the PFA membership.

Among those are to protect landowners from losing land and land value through ambigous wording and unclear lines of authority.

According to officials, currently the state Department of Environmental Resources (DER), and the Army Corps of Engineers have jurisdiction over wetlands. The DER authority stems from regulations drawn up in 1978 to control the building of dams and the encroachment on waterways and floodplains.

Eckel said that as it is, definitions of wetlands are unclear and too nonspecific for landowners.

He said that PFA concerns for wetlands legislation are:

• For a clear definition as to what constitutes a wetland; • That permitting decisions and issuances, for work desired to be done in a wetland area, be made in a timely fashion. He said that a 60-day maximum wait for action on a permit application should be instituted. Currently, he said, it is taking more than a year to get permits.

• Making sure that a continuing grandfather clause be included. He said PFA wants an exemption included in any wetlands protection law for those who have been actively using a wetlands area for 25 years to continue to do so. He said the 25-year time should be continuing, and not locked into specific historic dates.

• That landowners who lose the right to use their property must be compensated. "If it is in the public interest to set aside the land, then the public should share in the cost of setting it aside."

• That the law supercede the jurisdiction of any other wetlands regulation authority, state or federal. It is needed, he said, so that landowners who are in compliance with a wetlands law, can't be penalized by another agency about a wetlands dispute.

Another concern of the PFA is to get a bottle bill signed into law. Efforts to get a mandatory 5-cent deposit on bottles and cans have been ongoing for at least 10 years.

Although certain elected officials have said that recylcing laws should be allowed to have a chance at working to solving the problem of discarded cans and bottles, Eckel said PFA disagrees.

According to Eckel, since the recycling law only applies to high density municipalities and not to the rural, less densly populated areas, it doesn't matter how anyone waits for laws to work. He said that recycling laws will never curtail people from throwing waste into fields along rural roads.

Many neighboring states have a 5 cent deposit on cans and bottles. The position of PFA is to also achieve a similar deposit program to provide an incentive for people to keep waste beverage containers and then dispose of them properly.

PMMB Needs Field Staff, Funding To Pay Them

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) needs money — money it had been promised.

According to comments made during a meeting Monday between the PMMB and the members of the state House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, the board needs enough tax-generated funds from the state general fund to add people to its field staff.

The people are needed in order to fulfill the PMMB's legislated responsibility of regulating and monitoring the state's dairy industry.

Such information, along with a basic review of the what the PMMB is, was presented by PMMB officials to committee members. The entire meeting was set up as an information sharing session.

A number of members of the Pennsylvania Farmers Association (PFA) observed the meeting. Monday was the PFA's annual legislative tour and conference.

According to Robert Derry, chairman of the PMMB, the meeting with the House committee was the first such meeting since 1982.

Rep. Kenneth Cole, chairman of the ag committee, said that, because of the large number of representatives who are new to the committee, the review of the PMMB was doubly beneficial — it offered an education to the new members about PMMB's role in the dairy industry, as well as providing insight into what action legislators should try to take in working on the 1991-92 budget.

A budget proposal by Gov. Robert Casey has offered no state funding of the PMMB.

Two years ago, the PMMB had received $900,000 in general fund allocations. At that level, the PMMB requested more money in order to keep personnel levels.

At that time, Casey told the industry that extra funding was impossible.

In response, the dairy industry proposed and supported raising its own licensing and regulatory fees in order to generate the additional income needed.

According to dairy industry representatives, the understanding with Casey was that the general fund appropriation would stay the same.

Casey, in his next budget proposal, which was passed, reduced the general fund allocation by $300,000, which is about the same amount generated by the increase in fees.

A number of politicians and industry representatives responded to the cut with strongly objecting news releases and public statements.

At the beginning of this year, with the current budget not balanced, Casey's administration proposed an additional cut of the entire $600,000 from general funds.

After more negative publicity about the proposal, Rep. Cole said he met with Casey and has received assurances that the PMMB would be adequately financed to see it through the end of June, the end of the current budget year.

However, in his new budget proposal, Casey also has eliminated all support for the PMMB.

John Pierce, PMMB executive secretary, told the committee that the agency currently cannot adequately fulfill its legislated obligations of inspecting bulk tanks and haulers, or monitor the sale of milk, which is one of its most important functions in protection of the dairy producers.

Over the years, the PMMB has been continually losing field employs, according to Pierce.

After giving a 20-minute presentation to the committee about the function and role of the PMMB, Pierce said that the agency needed help in securing additional funds to hire people to do the field jobs.

Steven Crawford, executive director of the House Ag and Rural Affairs Committee, said that if the PMMB is top-heavy (large number of employees in adminstration and management and few in field work), perhaps some of those management positions should be eliminated and re-appropriated at field positions.

However, Pierce said that the agency appeared top heavy because of the continuing elimination of positions and funding.

Management positions have also been eliminated, he said. He described the staffing of the PMMB administration as "bare bones."

Specifically, Pierce told the committee that he will need four auditors and three examiners.

He said that the estimated cost to the government for hiring one auditor is $41,732. That includes salary, retirement, social security, and other mandatory labor programs paid by the employer on behalf of the employee.

The total cost of one examiner is $33,641.

Since the positions are field positions, Pierce said the additional operating expense — such as mileage — is estimated at $12,000 for each field position.

Pierce said he would need a total of about $351,851, in order to re-expand the field staff to be able to do its job.

As it is, he said, even though a number of positions are on the books, he is being prevented from filling them because of a hiring freeze by the Casey administration.

Pirates Dairy Promotion Package Signed

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Citing a need to reach into new markets and out to new consumers, the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program recently agreed to an advertising package with the Pittsburgh Pirate Radio Network.

The campaign is to feature commercials touting Pennsylvania's ice cream and will be prepared by Jay Bell, the Pirate's shortstop.

Along with the advertising campaign, the PDPP will be preparing growth charts featuring Bell.

"The PDPP is excited to have such an outstanding spokesperson for the dairy industry," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Jay is a special individual who will present a positive image to young people and adults. We look forward to our promotion activities with him."

As an addition to the promotion, 150 disadvantaged Pittsburgh youth will attend a pirate baseball game on behalf of the PDPP.

The growth charts which will feature Bell holding a carton of milk are designed to encourage young people to drink more milk and become fit and wholesome like Bell.

The charts will be distributed on May 12, Dairy Day at the Ball Park. Youngsters, 13 years old and under, will receive a chart featuring the outstanding shortstop.

Bell is more than interested in Pennsylvania's dairy industry. At the PDPP's recent annual meeting, he shared autographs and discussed his life and baseball experiences. He shared with the dairy farmers his trek to the major leagues, much like a farmer's struggle to make it to the top.

The well-mannered 24-year-old ballplayer also expressed his interest and desire to promote a wholesome product.

UDS: February Milk Check A Disaster

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. — Dairy farmers across America this week received their final payments for milk they sold to manufacturers during the month of February.

The average payment in New York and Pennsylvania was about 99 cents per gallon, which is 27 percent less than the $1.33 they received for milk in February last year.

Edward D. Anna, president of United Dairy Services Board of Directors — a cooperative agency which provides marketing, management, accounting and educational services to dairy farmers — said the paycheck cut is disasterous.

"This payment is the same as an urban employee's weekly pay check. He said that a reduction of 27 percent in the pay checks of 29,000 families in the Northeast would be considered a national disaster, and would be on the front page of every major newspaper in the country and on the TV evening news.

"Well, it is a disaster, and it will be felt in homes throughout the United States," he said.

Over $300 million was lost to the Northeast rural economy last month, according to UDS.

"This loss will force many business owners to close their doors and seek alternative ways to feed their families. Many of them will use government assistance, putting more pressure on state and local government budgets," Anna said.

"Not only will this development heighten the demand for services, but it will erode the rural tax base as families lose their incomes, businesses, properties, and homes. Unfortunately, it is not as simple as a few farmers losing 33 cents per gallon income," he said.

There is no simple reason for the massive and rapid decline in dairy farm income, and there are no simple solutions, he said.

Contributing to the problem have been the reduction of the federal government's dairy farm support programs using general tax revenue. Also an increase in total world milk production, much of it produced in countries that heavily subsidize the dairy farmer, has made it impossible for American farmers to compete in the world market.

Many U. S. dairy farmers have increased their production, producing more pounds of milk to make up for their loss of income which resulted from lower prices per hundredweight. They need more total income, more than the currecnt 99 cents per gallon, to pay increasing taxes, higher operating costs, their mortgage and to feed their families.

The increase in milk supply, lower support prices and subsidized world competition are some of the underlying reasons that allow the dairy processors, or manufacturers, to pay farmers less for the milk they produce.

United Dairy Services is searching for new ways to turn the current rural economic disaster around, as are many other farmers and farmer organizations.

Farmers currently spend over $200 million per year in new product development and advertising and promotion.

In 1991 dairy farmers will also pay about $75 million is assessments to the federal government Commodity Credit Corporation to purchase excess dairy products in an attempt to prevent any further reduction in dairy farm income.

United Dairy Services is joining with others in an effort to get government regulatory md legislative support that will encourage the market place and consumer to share a fair proportion of consumer dollars with the farm community as they did during 1990.

There is federal legislation being introduced by Vermont Sen. Leahy that would improve the nation's dairy farmers' income, according to Anna.

The legislation would increase the farmer pay price by 8 cents per gallon over the next few months. The legislatlon would also provide for increasing minimum milk solids in whole milk that enhance the taste and nutritional value.

The use of nonfat dry milk or condensed skim milk for this purpose would also reduce the cost of the dairy support program by reducing the need for the government to purchase these solids.

IA Exec Takes New Position

ARLINGTON, Va. — R.C. "Bob" Sears, the Irrigation Association's (IA) executive vice president, accepted a newly created position as vice president of membership and technical services for the association.

This is the key, full-time field position IA President Bob Emmerich recommended last October.

As vice president of membership and technical services, Sears will be working to support member organizations and generate member services which will be critical to the long-term viability of the association.

He will also oversee various technical programs, including continued participation in domestic and international standards development, educational seminars, and the rapidly expanding certification program. In addition, he will also be responsible for supporting irrigation industry efforts to deal with legislative and regulatory initiatives relative to water management issues in western states where droughts and water shortages are major concerns.

According to IA President Bob Emmerich, "This move will put our industry and the association in a much better position strategically. The cutbacks in water deliveries in California and the measures that the state is taking to conserve water will serve as the models for the nation in years to come. It's imperative that we become more active players."

Sears has served as the executive vice president of the IA for the past five years. During his tenure with the association, he has helped expand the organization's certification program which now includes irrigation designers, irrigation contractors, and auditors. He was also responsible for managing the organization's annual International Expo and Technical Conference.

Sears was born in Watsonville, Calif. After serving in the U.S. Army during the final days of the Korean War, Sears returned to the College of Idaho, where he completed his formal education. He has more than 35 years of experience in the irrigation industry and has been an IA certified designer in the ag-sprinkler classification since 1984.

Are We Breeding The Right Kind Of Cow?

GEORGE F.W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University Of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. — I just received the latest mailing of annual summaries from the National DHIA office, and one table of data really shocked me.

Is it true, I asked myself, that the majority of U.S. Holstein cows-- mature Holstein cows-- weigh only 1,390 pounds as it says in one of the tables?

To make matters worse, the average number of lactations is less than mature, just around three, and those cows weigh, according to the National DHIA summaries, only 1,350 pounds.

In judging dairy cattle for years, the Official Dairy Cow Score Card of the U.S. Purebred Dairy Cattle Association has been our guide, at least in this form, since 1943. And there are some very definitive statements about what constitutes an acceptable dairy cow of a certain breed.

For Holsteins, it says about size that "a mature cow in milk should weigh a minimum of 1,500 pounds."

Compared with the current DHIA data, this means that our mature Holstein cows are, on average, at least 110 pounds short of the expected "minimum" size, which is supposedly related to best producing capacity.

What's going on here?

Have we changed direction in our breeding goals and practices since the inception of the score card in 1943, or are our Holstein cows actually becoming smaller as we increasingly ask them to produce more and more milk?

If this is true, then is our former conviction true-- that bigger dairy animals find it easier to produce more milk because they can eat more feed such as roughage and, with less stress on them and on our pocketbooks, convert more feed into more milk more easily?

Or, over the years, have we selected against big dairy animals as we selected for more milk in the pail?

And if this is true, I really must ask all dairy breeders pointedly if it is right to continue in this way?

In another 10, 20, 40 years down this road, what will the size of our mature Holstein cows be? And is this what we really want in our efforts to optimize dairy farm income?

There is another possible explanation to this puzzle. Disregarding the time trends and actual weights for a moment, it's plausible that these data are not correct, even though they are the official National DHIA data. It's important to explore, then, how these data are obtained and by whom.

They are not scientifically determined weights on scales at a representative time in the life of our cows. Instead, we know the data come from DHIA supervisors and dairypersons who read measuring tapes, which have a +/- 50-pound error, or they are visual estimates, taken at the beginning of lactations.

Discounting unintentional or intentional errors, the crux of the matter, I think, is in the date of determination -- the beginning lactation.

More than ever, our high-producing dairy animals are often in a more or less severe nutritional deficit during the beginning weeks, even months, of lactation. In other words, bodyweight is lost while this deficit is going on.

The latest buzzword applied to this is "body condition scoring," although the term has been around for at least 30 years.

But it's catching on now to mean that we see some of our cows are getting too thin, have low body condition scores, or have at least one unit score less than before the beginning of the lactation.

This soon translates into decreased milk production and decreased persistency in the second half of lactation. And this is not what we want-- not smaller cows, I think, in our first attempt to explain the national weight data, nor thinner cows, in our second attempt to explain the national average weights.

In either case, in my estimation we are not doing the right thing. It deserves to be pointed out and remedied, because it will translate into our pocketbooks sooner or later, especially in these hard times of low milk prices.

We cannot afford now to feed as much purchased feed as we used to or would like to. This purchased feed would have kept smaller or thinner cows going in addition to the bigger ones, which have it easier on a larger roughage portion in their daily ration.

What about the other dairy breeds in this country? Brown Swiss have about the same data discrepancy, 1,500 pounds expected minimum and national DHIA 1,390 pounds average for mature cows.

Jerseys are supposed to be at least 1,000 pounds, but DHIA has them at 970 pounds.

The dairy goat DHIA average is 160 pounds at mature weight, but there is no national score card yet.

On the other hand, Ayrshires are supposed to be 1,200 pounds and Guernseys 1,150, while the national DHIA data average is 1,210 pounds for Ayrshires and 1,190 pounds for Guernseys.

For years, Guernsey breeders have said that their cow is too small or too weak for the needed higher milk production.

Maybe the national DHIA data are right here, that for Ayrshires and Guernseys they reflect 1) a trend in this country over the years towards a bigger cow that can handle feeds more economically, and/or 2) that the DHIA data as obtained at Ayrshire and Guernsey farms are more reliable and/or reflecting fewer thin cows and better body condition monitoring, the result of more appropriate feed rations.

In either case, it is an interesting phenomenon that deserves reflection by our progressive dairypersons and has the potential for higher herd profits from consequential actions.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Well-Kept Dairy Farms For 1991 Beautification Recognition Program

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

COVINGTON (Tioga Co.)—The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc., is ready to receive applications for 1991. This program rewards clean, well-kept farmsteads to help with consumer acceptance of dairy products in the store.

State President Dan Baker, dairyman from Covington, Tioga County, said the program has received great acceptance in the past and officers look forward to a good response again this year. "There are plenty of good looking dairy farms out there that have not been judged," Baker said. "And even those who have entered the selection process in past years, should enter again."

The program provides rewards of recognition to producers who maintain attractive production sites. This recognition benefits the entire dairy industry, as well as individual dairymen. Not only does the favorable publicity generated by the program in the general press help bring modern farm practices to the attention of urban people, farmers use the distinction to promote their own operation or seek and hire farm labor.

Paul Nichols, the secretary for the Pennsylvania program, said applications may be sent in now to apply for the award. Deadline for applications is April 15, 1991. Judging takes place in the month of May and is based on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds and surroundings. The states are divided into districts and a local committee oversees the program in each district. A team of judges designated by the local committee visits each farm and uses a score sheet to rate each farm. In Pennsylvania, in addition to this team of judges, the sanitarian for the farm's cooperative or dealer-handler is asked to be part of the judging process.

"One of the things I always tell people is that even though they may not now have the most fancy place, they can work toward the principles of the Dairy of Distinction program," Nichols said. "By doing this, they work toward a goal that encourages consumers to use more dairy products."

Winners receive a colorful, 18x24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed at the entrance to the farmstead. In addition, as in past years, an 11x14-inch color portrait of the farm will be given by Lancaster Farmning to each winning farm in the Pennsylvania program.

"As a dairy farmer, you work hard all year long, taking care of your farm," said Helen Fountain, program executive secretary. "In addition to managing your herd, there are lawns to mow, flowers to plant, and overall maintenance to keep farm buildings looking great. You deserve to be recognized for all the hard work, dedication and pride you put into your farmstead.

"It's time to apply for you and your farm to receive the coveted honor of Dairy of Distinction. This award is based on the concept that attractive farms enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk, thereby stimulating milk sales and encouraging public support for the dairy industry."

Active dairy farms in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are eligible to apply for the award. Criteria for Dairy of Distinction awards include: clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads and lands; and well-maintained fences. Cleanliness of animals, barnyard, feed areas, as well as manure management, are also taken into consideration.

Applications are available from each state's program secretary or local cooperative extension. In New York, contact Evelyn Lightfoote, 3053 Depew Road, Stanley, N.Y. 14561. Phone: (716) 526-6654. In New Jersey, contact Angust Knispel, RD 1, Box 325, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: 201) 735-4989. In Pennsylvania, contact Paul Nichols, American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, 1853 East Third St. Williamsport, PA 17701. Phone: (717) 323-2552.

Singing Brook Farms in Bedford County and owned by the Obie Snider family at Imler is an example of the farms that were designated Dairy of Distinction last year. Over the last four year, 363 farms in Pennsylvania have received the recognition.

need the extra $1.25 per hundredweight that the bill would have brought. (As early as next month.)

2. The bill addressed the surplus problem by raising the fluid milk standards to California's level — which would have caused more solids to be used and would have resulted in the government buying less non-fat powder. (An estimated savings of $350 million to $400 million.)

3. The bill represented a great deal of effort to provide EMERGENCY RELIEF to dairy farmers stricken with a sudden and dramatic cut in income.

4. It was never meant to be a long-term fix to roller-coaster milk prices, nor was it meant to be a permanent solution for surpluses.

5. It was a way to buy time while the dairy industry and the government debated and worked on a better answer, or a longer-term solution — such as implementing an effective supply management program.

6. The bill would have raised the Class I fluid price to last August's level — and then that extra money would have been pooled nationally, resulting in about $1.25/cwt. for every dairy farmer. There was a risk to this national pooling — because it would take away from the regional price advantage we have in the Northeast with our higher-than-average Class I fluid sales, and because it's something we in the Northeast fought against at last fall's federal order hearings. But the national pooling of this emergency revenue, in which everyone shares equally, made it possible for the overwhelming majority of dairy farmer organizations around the country to unite and support the Leahy initiative.

7. Finally, because the bill provided emergency, temporary relief, we not only believe it was worth taking a risk, but also, in good conscience, we believe we had a responsibility as true friends of dairy farmers to support and fight for it.

Jacques Scoreboard

6770
More bushels per acre is the name of the game. And in 1989 on-farm trials, 6770 hammered Pioneer hybrid 3475 for a six bushel per acre yield advantage. Fast starter with strong legs.

8210
An all-around proven performer, 8210's statistics show very good staygreen, excellent vigor, strong stalks and roots and very good stress tolerance. With this one's record, it's no wonder the opposition hates to face it.

4770
It's no wonder this one was voted rookie of the year in 1989. 4770 clobbered opponents, scoring seven to nine bushels more per acre than top competitors in 1989 on-farm trials. Imagine the power 4770 could deliver on your team!

Demonstrations, Case Histories Used To Teach Tractor Safety

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Concerned because farming is the most dangerous occupation in the U.S., agriculture students at Penn Manor held a tractor safety program on the school grounds on Wednesday evening.

More than 100 people watched as Millersville Fire Company members demonstrated how to rescue persons trapped underneath a tractor.

Gus Birchler, agriculture department coordinator, admonished the crowd not to waste valuable time figuring out if the rescue team needs to be called when there is an accident.

"They would rather come out even if they aren't needed than be called too late," he said.

Firemen showed the group how to lift a tractor with air bags and wooden blocks to rescue a trapped person.

The rescue squad cautioned farmers to remember to block both sides of the tractor as it is lifted so that it doesn't tilt.

Those who rescue a trapped person must also look for such small items as a nut on the chest of a trapped person. "If it pivots under the weight of the tractor, you'' tear the gut out of a person and make him worse than before," a fireman warned.

Farmers also had a chance to examine the safety differences between a new John Deere tractor and older models. Gene Walker of Landis Brothers Inc., said, "Safety is uppermost in the minds of all tractor companies."

He urged farmers to invest in roll guards and shields if their tractors are missing them. He stressed the importance of reading tractor owner manuals to be aware of the dangers and how to prevent them.

His warnings were intensified by the testimonies of two local farmers who were injured in tractor accidents.

Richard Neff told the audience, "I thought I was a careful and safe farmer. I tried not to take chances."

But one year ago, Neff carried a pair of shears in his hand while driving the tractor. When he accidently dropped the shears, he swerved and the tractor wheel caught a guide wire to an electric pole.

Although Neff tried to jump free, the tractor fell on him and crushed his pelvis and his urethra tube. He lay for 30 minutes before he was found, and it took another 30 minutes for firemen to rescue him.

"I'm still not back at work," said a subdued Neff.

He warned farmers, "If you don't have new equipment with safety equipment that is all the more reason to be careful."

Harold Bitner told of his own narrow escape with death that happened 13 years ago. Thinking the tractor was out of gear and being in a hurry, Bitner started the tractor while he stood beside it. When the tractor caught his foot, Bitner fell and the tractor ran over his back and arm. Fortunately, he recovered within nine weeks from a leg that was broken in two places.

Crystal Shoff, an Manor FFA senior, said the safety program was a senior agricultural class project. Members invited about 300 persons to the program. She was pleased that so many in the community attended the meeting to learn safety measures.

FFA students at Penn Manor High School asked the Millersville Fire Company to demonstrate proper rescue methods when a person is trapped beneath a tractor.

Manor FFA Teacher Inducted In Penn State Hall Of Fame

Gus Birchler was inducted into the Penn State Hall of Fame on Monday night. Above, Birchler teaches agricultural students at Penn Manor High School.

LOU ANN GOOD

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — For 22 years, Gus Birchler has been teaching agricultural education at Penn Manor High School in Millersville.

His students and peers said that Birchler is always doing really special things, but doesn't take any special recognition for himself.

Monday night, Birchler got some special recognition. He was inducted into the Hall of Fame at Penn State College of Agriculture — only the 12th person to be inducted.

Alpha Tau Alpha, a professional honorary fraternity in agricultural education, presented the award at their annual banquet. Birchler was selected from agricultural teachers across the state as the best cooperating teacher who works with student teachers and the College of Agriculture.

Student teacher Barry Spangler of Mifflinburg nominated Birchler for the award. He said, "Birchler has tremendous care for his students and also the student teachers that work with him. He goes above and beyond the call of duty for the ag students and the student teachers."

Dr. Gary Campbell, assistant superintendent at Penn Manor, said, "Birchler deserves every accolade he gets. He exemplifies a caring teacher who instills in kids self esteem and gives them a sense of pride and accomplishment. I've seen him take kids on the verge of dropping out of school and out of life, and get them in his ag program. Four years later, those same kids walk off the field holding a diploma — all because he cared."

Dr. Campbell added, "If we could transplant his qualities to the regular classroom setting, schools would be greatly improved."

Birchler also coaches the poultry team, dairy products team, and land judging team.

"Almost every year, Penn Manor has someone from those teams going on to competition in Kansas and the Eastern States Exposition because of Birchler," said Carole Faye, vocation agriculture teacher at Penn Manor. "The kids really love him."

Birchler, who lives in Conestoga, is a Penn State graduate, and is the department coordinator in the Ag department at Penn Manor. He also works with local farmers to help them become American Farmers, the highest FFA achievement.

New Corn Uses Cited

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Expanded and new uses for corn were cited as reasons for increased utilization of corn in 1990, according to the "World of Corn" published by the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

More than 1.1 billion bushels of corn were used in food and industrial applications during the year, according to the publication, which is sponsored each year by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.

That compares with slightly more than 1 billion bushels in 1989.

The largest use of corn remains as animal feed. For 1990, consumption of corn as animal feed jumped to more than 4.8 billion bushels compared to more than 4.4 billion bushels the previous year.

For 1990, other large uses were as ethanol for blended fuels, 367 million bushels; beverages, slightly more than 330 million bushels; industrial starches, such as used in papers and biodegradable plastics, more than 139.5 million bushels; and baked goods, miscellaneous foods, and confections, more than 40 million bushels each.

The importance of new markets is illustrated by the increased use of ethanol.In 1989, 349 million bushels were utilized for ethanol.

The 1990 figure of 367 million bushels represents an increase of 5.2 percent. As recently as 1975, only 25 million bushels of corn were used to produce ethanol.

Sweeteners offer another example. Corn sweetener production as recently as 1975 utilized only 207 million bushels of corn. The figure in 1990 was estimated at 590 million bushels of corn, making corn-based sweeteners the largest domestic source of sweeteners for food and beverage items.

The 1990 corn harvest increased to 7.9 billion bushels from 7.5 billion bushels the previous year. It was the fifth highest harvest on record since 1919, representing the corn growers' commitment to provide an adequate supply of corn for expanded uses.

Corn remained the top cash crop in the country, with a projected value of more than $18 billion dollars based on an average price of $2.35 per bushel for the year.

Iowa was the top corn-producing state with a harvest of more than 1.5 billion bushels. Illinois was second with more than 1.3 billion bushels harvested.

RCMA Farmers Elect Directors, Delegates

BATAVIA, N.Y. — New York State's independent dairy farmer members of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA) elected representatives to the Board of Directors during regional meetings conducted throughout the State.

Elected were:

James Sullivan of Hammond, representing Region 3, St. Lawrence, Franklin, Clinton and Essex counties. Sullivan and two sons operate a 650-acre farm with a milking herd of 85 cows. He is a volunteer firefighter and has been a member of the Hammond Central School Board of Education for 20 years.

Fred Goodnough of Mannsville, representing Region 4, Jefferson and Lewis counties. Goodnough and his wife, Janet, the Jefferson County Farm Bureau president, operate a 600-acre farm with the help of their two oldest sons. Goodnough is a councilman for the Town of Ellisburg. He is a volunteer firefighter and served on the South Jefferson Central School Board for 15 years.

Paul McGeoch of Argyle, representing Region 5, Columbia, Greene, Rensselaer, Albany, Schoharie, Montgomery, Schenectady, Washington, Saratoga, Fulton, Herkimer, Hamilton and Warren counties. McGeoch is the fourth generation of his family to farm the 250 acres that was first settled by his ancestors in 1854. Now he and his wife, Barbara, have been joined in the operation by their sons, Raymond and Russell. They have a herd of 70 registered Holsteins. McGeoch is a member of the Holstein Association, Farm Bureau and Cooperative Extension.

Bill McCracken of Hamilton, representing Region 6, Oswego, Oneida and Madison counties. McCracken started dairy farming in 1968, when he purchased a calf as a 4-H project for one of his sons. At the time, he was working for Guiding Eyes for the Blind in Yorktown Heights, an organization that trains guide dogs. The family's interest in dairy animals grew as more 4-H calves were added to the herd. In 1976, McCracken bought a farm in Hamilton where he and his son, Chris, now milk a herd of 130 cows.

Bill Nedrow of Lansing, representing Region 7, Cayuga, Onondaga, Cortland and Tompkins counties. Nedrow and his brother, Jon, milk 500 cows on their 1,300-acre farm. Also involved in the operation are Bill's two sons, Jeffrey and Andrew, and Jon's son, Steve. Bill served 11 years on the Tompkins County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service board and 20 years on the county Farm Bureau Board.

Anne Livingston of Whitney Point, representing Region 8, Broome, Chenango and Otsego counties. Mrs. Livingston and her husband, Rensslear, farm about 600 acres and have a herd of 90 cows. John, one of their three children, has joind them in the farming operation. Mrs. Livingston is a member of the Broome County Farmers Home Administration Committee and served on several Cooperative Extension committees. She is a member of the Farm Bureau, the town Assessment Review Board, the county Agriculture District Committee and the Countryside Christian Chapel.

Arlan Button of Cohocton, representing Region 9, Wayne, Ontario, Seneca, Yates, Schuyler, Steuben, Chemung and Tioga counties. Button has been a dairy farmer for 14 years. He operates a 360-acre farm with 45 cows and 400 sheep. He served on the Avoca Central School Board of Education for 11 years and is a former member of the Steuben County Cooperative Extension Board. He and his wife, Carol, have five children.

Roger Cardot of Cassadaga, representing Region 10, Wyoming, Livingston, Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Erie, Niagara, Orleans, Monroe and Genesee counties in New York and Erie, Crawford and Warren counties in Pennsylvania. Cardot and his sister, Nancy McVaugh, operate a 225-acre dairy farm that has been in the family since 1866. After the death of their father, the brother and sister operated the farm for their mother, then purchased it in January 1989. They have been expanding the operation and currently milk 55 cows and have approximately 45 young stock.

Bill Murphy of Prospect Farms, Stamford, representing Region 11, Delaware, Dutchess, Orange, Ulster and Sullivan counties in New York, Sussex, Warren, Hunterdon and Passaic counties in New Jersey. Prospect Farms was started by Murphy's family in the early 1800s. Bill's son Doug is the seventh generation to operate the farm, which now features a milking herd of 750 cows in six confinement barns. Murphy, a former executive of Grolier publishers, is a director of the Stamford National Bank and president of the Farmers Preservation Alliance, which is working to promote a strong rural influence in matters affecting the Upstate New York community.

Murphy is a member of RCMA's Executive Committee and is secretary of the organization.

RCMA's directors meet monthly in either Syracuse or Albany to set policy for the organization, which has 22,000 dairy farmer members throughout the Northeast. RCMA has led efforts to establish minimum milk prices in New York State, including the hearing scheduled to begin April 16 under the Rogers-Allen Act. The hearing, which is open to the public, will be conducted at the Polish Community Center, 225 Washington Avenue Extension, Albany. It is expected to last about two weeks.

Each RCMA region is represented by delegates at the annual meeting in December, when important membership issues are discussed. Regions with large independent membership have two delegates and two alternates. Delegates and alternates elected include:

Region 3, John Wilson of Hammond; Kevin Acres of Madrid.

Region 4, David Porter of Adams Center; Thomas Whitmore of Adams Center.

Region 5, Allen Wood of Schuylerville, Ronald Phillips of Pattersonville; George Jackowski of Amsterdam; Russell LaCroix of Greenwich.

Here They Come

Milk producers are being bombarded with more information than most of them can handle. Who has time, with all the Federal Milk Marketing Order hearings held in the last three years, the 1990 farm bill requiring studies of everything from inventory management to more money for fluid milk promotion, the flurry of ideas on how to get farm milk prices up to whatever level you want to pick and now some new vital signs that there's still life in GATT negotiations.

And there are many who are reluctant to change from what has generated the consistent 30 percent growth of the dairy industry in 15 years and has been the envy of all agriculture.

There may be a silent majority in the milk shed who would like to have higher prices now but aren't ready to make dramatic changes until they give the present system more time to work before they sign into new programs never tried before.

The conservatism of the milk producer may be part of the reason for the stability of the dairy industry and changes will come slowly and only after sufficient deliberation, but even the silent majority will have to make their opinions known sooner or later.

Sooner is better.

First Of The Changes

For producers shipping to handlers regulated by Federal Order 1, New England; F.O.2, New York; and F.O.4, Mid Atlantic, the changes resulting from the 1988 hearings will begin on April 1 for those Orders.

The biggest change in all three orders is going from two to three classes of milk.

Class I will still include all fluid milk products but the definition of such products will be the same in all three orders. Class II milk will be used in soft dairy products such as ice cream, yogurt and cottage cheese. Class III milk will be going into the manufacturing of butter, powder and all cheese except cottage cheese.

These changes will provide a higher price for Class II milk than Class III milk and require a new formula for calculating the Class II price that handlers pay. It really isn't new because it has been used for many years in other federal orders including Order 36 in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

The new Class II price will average 10 to 15 cents higher than the Class III price. The Class III price will be the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series which is now the Class II price.

Other Changes

Another change for Order 2 will be a 13-cent drop in the Class I differential from $2.55 to $2.42 to put it in closer alignment to fluid prices in other nearby marketing areas.

For producers inside the 201- to 210-mile zone, there will be an increase from 2.2 cents to 2.5 cents for each 10-mile zone closer to New York City but it will also mean a drop from a minus 1.5 cents to a minus 2.5 cents for each 10 miles beyond the 201- to 210-mile zone.

For the first time since producers organized it in 1938 there will be pooling requirements for handlers in Order 2. Now Order 2 handlers will have to provide at least 10 percent of their milk receipts for fluid use from September to November and five percent in December and January. This will reduce the need for call orders on Order 2 handlers when fluid milk supplies are short but won't eliminate it all together.

In the past, a designated plant maintained its pool status as long as the owner wished.

Now, pool plant designation in Order 2 can be lost if no milk is handled for 12 months or the plant loses its health approval.

Inventory Management Plans

A deadline of Feb. 6 was set for anyone who wanted to make a proposal for an inventory management plan for USDA to study before submitting a report to the House and Senate agriculture committees by July 31.

In between, there would be reports and impact analyses until the end of May and opportunity for public comment to the end of June.

Anyone with an idea should have included it in this process if they wanted it to be considered. By the deadline last month, over 80 proposals had been made that included everything from removing the whole program from USDA, to a heifer set aside program to using price alone to adjust supply and demand as it had in the first 30 years of the dairy program.

Many of the proposals are very similar but there are enough differences to make a lot of work for USDA to narrow them down to a manageable number for a review by the Congressional committees from May 15 to 29 before the public comment period.

The farm bill also calls for a supply management program in 1992 if Commodity Credit Corporation purchases are expected to exceed seven billion pounds of milk equivalent.

It's either that or a non-refundable producer assessment to cover the cost of CCC purchases over seven billion pounds so you'll see an inventory management program made ready this year.

Getting it approved may be a problem.

Other Plans

In the meantime, efforts are being made to provide relief to producers, locally at least, by other means.

Order 2 and Order 1 cooperatives have petitioned USDA to suspend the Louisville Plan payments this year. This would increase the blend price to producers 20 cents in March, 30 cents in April and 40 cents in May and June. Of course there would be no pay backs to producer in the fall but the money is needed now for crop planting expenses in the spring.

In addition, the Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency, made up of RCMA members and cooperatives, has petitioned the Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets in New York for a hearing to adopt an emergency milk marketing order. This would set minimiums of $14.50 for Class I milk and $11.50 for Class II milk. The Class III price would be 20- and 30-cents under the Class II price.

A hearing may be held this month so watch for the results in the farm press.

Farm Prices

With dairy product prices down to support levels and milk production continuing to increase, even with fewer cows, more pressure was put on the Minnesota-Wisconsin Price Series in February, moving it down 12 cents below January to $10.06 or just 16 cents above the support price.

With increasing production it appears that the M-W price will fall to the support price of $9.90 this spring as it did in 1988, just three years ago.

The only difference is that the support price then was $10.33 and now it's $9.90 for 3.5-percent milk.

So, you've been there before and survived and it wasn't 12 years ago.

It's the difference in the support price plus a 5-cent assessment to reduce program costs that is based on the 148 billion pounds of milk expected in 1991 that makes the difference now.

For February milk in Order 2 the Class I price fell 6 cents to $12.74 and the Class II price fell 13 cents to $10.06 making your blend price $10.99 at the 201- to 210-mile zone or 12 cents less than January.

If in fact the M-W price falls to the support price of $9.90, then you should be prepared for a blend price down to $10.50 or less in Order 2 (unless the Louisville Plan payments are suspended) and a weighted average price of about a dollar more in Order 4 this spring.

After that, farm prices should go up with seasonal drops in milk production through the summer and fall months getting close to $12 before the end of the year and averaging about $2.00 under last year's record high of $13.43 in Order 2.

Rogers-Allen Act Hearing Set In New York State

BATAVIA, N.Y. — Attention of Northeast dairy farmers is focused on Albany, where a milk price hearing under the Rogers-Allen Act is set to begin Tuesday, April 16. Experts say the result will influence farmers' milk prices not only in New York, but throughout the Northeast.

The Regional Cooperative Bargaining Agency (RCBA) is ready for the hearing, and will use testimony from a wide variety of witnesses to show the devastating economic situation in dairy farms throughout the state. In addition to dairy farmers, witnesses such as bankers, veterinarians, feed, fertilizer and equipment dealers will tell of the multi-million-dollar loss to the whole rural New York economy.

"This is more than a dairy farmer problem," says Carmen L. Ross, executive director of the Regional Cooperative Marketing Agency (RCMA), which is a member of RCBA. "Farmers have reduced their spending by millions of dollars across the state because their income has dropped so dramatically. This has a severe impact on the total upstate New York economy."

Richard T. McGuire, commissioner of agriculture and markets, called the hearing because RCBA asked the commissioner to use his powers under the Rogers-Allen Act to establish minimum milk prices. Prices requested by RCBA would generate a premium of approximately 80 cents to $1 per hundredweight for most of the state's dairy farmers. The commissioner will decide whether or not to set minimum prices based upon testimony presented at the hearing, which is expected to take about two weeks.

The hearing, which is open to the public, will be conducted at the Polish Community Center, 225 Washington Avenue Extension, Albany, beginning at 10 a.m. on April 16, and continue each succeeding business day until testimony is complete. After the first week of testimony, the commissioner said he may move the hearing to a smaller room at the Ag and Markets Department offices.

Persons interested in attending may call the RCMA office at 1-800-634-3723 to find out if the hearing has been moved.

Some bills have been introduced in the New York State legislature to speed up the Rogers-Allen process and to establish minimum milk prices. RCMA directors voted to endorse all legislation that generates higher income to dairy farmers, like the bills introduced by Senator John M. McHugh.

RCMA was informed by two of its member cooperatives, Upstate Milk Cooperatives Inc. and Niagara Milk Cooperative Inc., that they do not want the Western New York Marketing Area included in RCMA's efforts to set statewide minimum prices. The two cooperatives said they will oppose the portions of the petition that deal with the marketing area to be included. RCMA's leadership agreed to proceed with its efforts to obtain higher prices for all New York farmers.

PEA Reports Members Numbers Increase

MEDINA, Ohio — At the second annual meeting of the Producers' Equalization Agency (Agency) held at the Ramada Inn in West Middlesex, Pennsylvania on March 21, President Tom Croner reported that over 3,100 dairy producers have signed up with the farmer-directed agency dedicated to establishing over-order premiums for dairy farmers in eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

According to John Siglow, general manager of the Agency, the need for the Agency was recently proven by lower priced milk in the eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania market. Milk was sold at prices below current Class I over-order premiums because the vast majority of dairy farmers do not price milk in this market. As a result, over-order premiums paid to dairy farmers within the market will be forced to drop.

Two featured speakers at the meeting were nationally renowned ag-economists, Bob Jacobson, from Ohio State University and Dennis Mavrich from the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB).

Mavrich explained to the delegates how PMMB, a state appointed board, operates. During the question and answer period, he said that the current mandated Class I premium for $1.50 per cwt. (Area 5 - western PA) will expire at the end of this coming June, leaving dairy farmers with just a $0.15 per cwt. over-order premium. He also stated that plants are required to pay this premium because of the current PMMB regulation. When questioned about the possibility of extending the $1.50 beyond June 30, Mavrich was uncertain and could not speculate.

Jacobson predicted that the pricing roller coaster will continue for dairy producers, and pointed out that if the proposed Leahy Bill passes in the U.S. Congress, it is only a stopgap measure (at the time of this writing the Bill was defeated). Jacobson reminded the delegates that the Agency would give them an ongoing method for producers to establish over-order premiums. He urged them to inform other dairy farmers of this fact. As for the immediate future, he predicted that the June Class III price would be below the current support price level of $9.90.

"Today's dairy farmers are tremendously busy," said Croner, "and we know that the most common reason why a producer hasn't signed with the Agency is because he is uninformed or misinformed about the way the Agency operates. Once we can sit down and explain just how the Agency is run by its dairy farmer members, we're usually successful in getting another signature."

The delegates voted to amend the bylaws. First, they voted to change director representation to one director for every 250 producers. Second, they voted to extend the regional directors' term from one to three years. They also voted to allow greater participation of independent producers.

The objective of the Agency is to get agreements from dairy farmers to price their milk. So far, 3,100 farmers representing 2/3 of the market have agreed to price their milk. This can prevent unpriced milk from lowering over-order premiums. However, the vast majority of dairy farmers are needed in order to assure milk producers that their competitors are also paying the same over-order premiums.

Dairy farmers who have not yet joined the Agency are urged to call Siglow at 1-800-875-2250 for more information.

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age.

Chicago, Ill. — A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest hearing aid Beltone has ever developed will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

It's yours for the asking, so send for it now. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. The actual aid weighs less than an eighth of an ounce, and it fits completely into the ear canal.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Although a hearing aid may not help everyone, more and more people with hearing losses are being helped. For your free sample send your name, address, and phone number today to: Department 20184, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 West Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Friends Of County Agent Plan Retirement Party

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)—In appreciation for the service Jay Irwin, Lancaster County Extension Director has given to agriculture, agribusiness, and the community, friends of Irwin have planned an evening to reminisce. Irwin announced his retirement effective May 1, and John Schwartz has been named extension director to fill the vacancy.

This special event is scheduled for May 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the Farm and Home Center.

Irwin has received many national, state and community honors, but this retirement party is dedicated to the many farmers, 4-H youth, and business and community persons who would want to be part of a wish-you-well gathering.

An hour-long formal program will open the festivities and a number of family members, friends, and officials will bring greetings. An ice cream social will follow.

Anyone who would like to attend should send $5.00 for each ticket requested along with a stamped, self-addressed return envelope to the Lancaster County Extension office, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, PA 17601. Tickets will be sent to you by return mail. Deadline for requesting tickets is May 1.

In addition, notes of friendship and appreciation may also be sent to the same address. The staff has asked that your appreciation notes not be folded so they can be easily inserted into the pages of a notebook. If you have questions about this event, call the Lancaster Extension Office at (717) 394-6851.

30 YEARS AGO
THIS WEEK

-At least one Lancaster County Dairyman does not agree with the philosophy that you have to have a big herd to have a good herd.

David Breckbill, owner and farmer of Maple Springs Farm, Lancaster R7, has 18 cows in the milking string, but he can show you some of the best production records in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckbill live on the 25 acre farm where Mr. Breckbill has lived since he was born some 70 years ago. Here they have reared four sons and two duahgter and seen them marry and start families of their own.

My family has owned the land since it was split off the original Hans Herr farm of 2,000 acres, Breckbill says. His grandmother was a Herr and one of the heirs of a portion of the original farm.

With only 25 acres of ground, Breckbill buys all his grain feed. He grows only enough corn for silage and green chop in the summer when pastures will not carry his cows. "I have not had to buy any hay for two years," he says, but he does purchase some straw. He plants only enough small grain to get his hay crops established.

-Today is the last day of the seventh annual Home Show, sponsored by the Lancaster Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Guernsey Sales Pavilion, Lincoln Highway, east of Lancaster.

The show, running from Tuesday through today features 50 exhibits, $500 worth of prizes and free balloons and lollipops for the kiddies.

Attendance has been good, a spokesman for the Junior Chamber of Commerce said late this week, and the sows has been a success.

-Classified ad: FARM FOR SALE-327 acre farm with 127 acre timber together with a 2 acre lake, a park and adjoining pavilion, two beautiful homes and a full set of farm buildings. 30 acres wheat, 50 acres barley. A real show place priced at $110,000. See us for full details. Red Rose Real Estate, 2207 Columbia Ave., Lancaster, EX 4-0725.

-Ad from First Federal Savings and Loan of Lancaster-current dividend 3½ % per annum paid on savings.

-Twenty-three boys and girls, all prospective dairy farmers, paid $5,130 for 29 heifers at the fourth annual Guernsey junior calf sale at the Pennsylvania State University. Prices ranged from $50 to $430. They buyers, all of them 4-H Club members or Future Farmers of America youths from fourteen counties and Maryland, will grow out their calves as educational projects in dairying and parley them into future herds of their own.

-The Lancaster County Baby Beef and Lamb Club met recently at the John Neff School in Neffsville.

Members answered roll call by giving a report on their baby beef or lamb.

For the program Joyce Nolt recited a monologue and Julianne Erb sang two solos.

Tom King, extension livestock specialist from Penn State and well-known in this area, was speaker of the evening. His talk was on baby beef care and management. He stated the three important factors in tending a beef are feeding, breeding and management.

Tulpehocken Holds FFA Banquet

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — The annual Tulpehocken FFA Banquet was held recently. President Marlin Musselman opened the meeting along with the FFA officers.

Guests were introduced by the student advisor, John Bicksler. Greetings were given by state treasurer Eric Marshall. Marshall reminded both FFA members and those in attendance how important the agricultural industry is.

Lolly Lesher, Dietrichs Milk Products, milks product coordinator, served as keynote speaker. She spoke about vast agriculture careers and opportunities that begin with only two percent of the U.S. population involved in agriculture production. However, 20 percent of the population, in Pennsylvania, is employed in agriculture. The farmer is becoming a specialist, and will rely on specialists who promote animal nutrition, crop management, veterinary care, etc.

Those receiving appreciation awards were Donald Daub and Amos Musselman who served on the agriculture advisory council. Bill Keener represented Evergreen Tractor, Inc., which made a tractor available for the agriculture mechanics class.

An outstanding judging award went to Marlin Musselman for his livestock judging. He placed first in the state competition at FFA Activities Week and went on to national competition in Kansas City.

Receiving scholarship awards were Andrew Bicksler, top scholar, and Loretta Loump and Marlin Musselman.

Those receiving honorary awards were Ilene Batz, Ray Himmelberger, and Emmy Weaver. All three are members of the High School staff.

Limit Vine To 60 Buds

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The pruned grapevine, ready to produce a full harvest, should be limited to about 60 fruiting buds. Penn State Master Gardener Fred C. Hopper demonstrates pruning for the four-cane Kniffen Umbrella system at his home at 840 White Church Road, York Springs. The meeting on March 19 was one in a series of Green Thumb meetings being conducted by Penn State Extension to help Adams County residents develop gardening skills.

Crop Insurance Deadline Nears

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The last date applications can be accepted for crop insurance on 1991 spring-planted crops in Pennsylvania is April 15, 1991, according to Brian Hoff, area claims specialist for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

The crops that can be insured are canning beans, corn, forage seeding, grain sorghum, green peas, oats, potatoes, soybeans, sweet corn, tobacco, and tomatoes.

Contact your crop insurance agent to see what crops are available in your county.

Hoff said that the multiple peril policies provide protection against unavoidable causes of crop damage when the producer has followed good management practices, and that a wide range of coverage options are being offered.

"Both the amount of protection that can be purchased and the cost of the protection take the individual producer's previous yield experience into consideration," Hoff said. "Someone who can furnish records showing a history of high yields is eligible for increased protection and a lower premium rate."

Another attractive feature of the policies, the insurance official said, is the opportunity for each farmer to decide from several alternatives what percentage of an average yield he wants the insurance to guarantee and what amount of indemnity he wants to be paid if there is a loss.

Crop insurance policies are available through local private insurance agents.

Limousin Foundation Endorses McLean

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — The North American Limousin Foundation (NALF) is the first beef breed organization to officially endorse the efforts of McDonald's Corporation in marketing lean beef.

Announcement of the NALF endorsement was delivered to Edward Rensi, president and chief operating officer of McDonald's USA, at the annual meeting of the National Live Stock and Meat Board in Chicago. The Limousin breed backed up their support with a $10,000 check.

"We're fully aware these dollars are only a small portion of the total budget McDonald's has committed to the research, promotion, and introduction of the McLean Deluxe Sandwich," said Dr. Wayne Vanderwert, NALF executive vice president, "But, dollars aside, we hope our contribution speaks to the fact that industry support exists for the marketing of lean beef."

McDonald's new 91 percent fat-free burger, dubbed the McLean Deluxe, has captured the imagination of the U.S. beef industry. The new product, successfully test marketed and scheduled for national marketing in April, has also stirred debate about whether supplies can meet the potentially vast demand.

Consider that McDonald's purchases 10 percent to 12 percent of all market beef produced in this country each year. Consider a new McDonald's restaurant is opened somewhere in the world every 17 hours.

On the industry side of the fence, consider a comment made by NCA economist Chuck Lambert: "If all ground beef in the country — about 7 billion pounds — were a 90 percent lean product, another 3 million head of fed cattle would be required, or each carcass would have to yield an additional 56 pounds of lean beef, either by increasing lean production or by decreasing fat."

Rensi told participants at the National Live Stock and Meat Board Meeting, "The beef industry used to make money marketing fat, but no more."

He spoke of the need for cooperation within the industry to meet consumer demand for a leaner beef product. "Attacks on McDonald's are attacks on your industry," said Rensi. "We are your partners. We need to fight our battles as partners."

According to Rensi, McDonald's is prepared to hold up their end of the bargain. He says McDonald's will continue its policy of buying only domestic beef. Moreover, he says they are prepared to pay 40 cents per pound more for ground beef that fits their McLean specifications.

"In many ways, McDonald's and other retailers continue to lead the battle against fat, the battle the beef industry should be leading," said Vanderwert. "As the fastest growing major beef breed in the United States, the Limousin breed is committed to helping the industry provide beef products that fit a healthy lifestyle."

NALF's endorsement coincided with the recent announcement the National Beef Promotion and Research Board has authorized McDonald's to use the beef checkoff logo in their advertising of the McLean Deluxe. It is the first time private industry has been granted permission to utilize the logo.

Dauphin Co. Preserves Farmland

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — A public meeting will be held by the Dauphin County Agricultural Land Preservation Board on April 18, 1991 to explain new programs designed to preserve viable farmland in the county.

Farmland is disappearing at an alarming rate. In Dauphin County alone, an average of six acres of active farmland per day were lost between 1982 and 1987. In 1989, the average of land subdivided in Dauphin County came to 20.25 acres per day.

In 1988, the Pennsylvania legislature amended the Agricultural Security Area Law to pave the way for a $100 million dollar bond issue to purchase conservation easements from Pennsylvania farmers. In January 1990, the Dauphin County Commissioners appointed a seven-member board to administer the program for the county.

The purpose of the program is to preserve agriculture in Pennsylvania by preserving prime farmland. The purchase of agricultural conservation easements provides attractive, reasonable, and fair financial alternatives and incentives to farmland owners to keep their land in agricultural production.

A conservation easement is a transfer of the right to develop property. It is important to understand that the farmland owner is not selling the land.

The owner still holds title to the land and may continue to farm it. He may even sell the land, but only for agricultural use. Through the end of 1992, approximately $950,000 is earmarked for easement purchases in Dauphin County.

Under regulations established by the Dauphin County Agricultural Land Preservation Board, any owner of land currently in agricultural use may apply to the program if the following conditions are met.

- The land must be in an agricultural security area. This is an area of at least 500 acres, formed by one or more farm owners, which offers protection from nuisance ordinances, which restrict normal farming operations.
- To date, three agricultural security areas have been created in Halifax, Conewago, and Jackson townships. More municipalities are in various stages of establishing these areas.
- The farm must be capable of generating $25,000 in gross annual receipts.
- At least 50 percent of the tract must be in soil capability class I thru IV.
- At least 50 percent of the tract must be in use for agricultural purposes.
- Cropland must be capable of producing yields egual to the county average.
- The tract must be at least 10 acres in size.

More details on the county program will be presented at the April 18 meeting, beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Dauphin County Agriculture and Natural Resources Center at 1451 Peters Mountain Road (Route 225) in Dauphin.

For more information about the Easement Purchase Program or agricultural security areas, contact the Dauphin County Conservation District, (717) 921-8100.

When the IRS Knocks

Last weekend with my various W-2 forms and 1099's in hand, I sat down to file my 1990 tax return. Several hours later, the forms were signed; checks were written; envelopes were sealed and stamped. With a somewhat triumphant toss, I dropped them off at a corner mail box.

Now I hope that's the last I hear from the IRS for a year!

I think in the back of every taxpayer's mind is the question, "Did I fill that out right? I hope I don't get audited!"

But, what if the IRS knocks?

Careful recordkeeping makes the job of filing taxes easier. It also makes an audit less threatening.

If you receive a letter in the mail, read it closely. The IRS sends letters to taxpayers for many reasons. They are not all audit notices.

Even if it is an audit notice, that doesn't mean a government agent will knock on your door. In many cases, you can handle the audit by sending letters and photocopies through the mail in a correspondence audit.

When dealing with the IRS (or any company), keep a copy of all the correspondence. I recommend sending the letter and forms using certified mail. This guarantees the IRS's receipt of the material.

During an office audit, the IRS employee will question you about certain lines on your filed return. Unless it is one of the randomly selected audits done for research, your entire return will not be reviewed. But you will need to provide verification for those identified items.

According to Consumer Reports magazine, some of the most frequently questioned items include travel and entertainment expenses, home office deductions, exchange of property, and losses from rental property.

Do you have receipts for all the improvements made to your home? Do you have bank statements verfiying loan payments? Can you show the agent, in writing, the amount of money you gave in 1990 to your church, synagogue, or the United Way? Do you make meaningful notations on the memo lines of your checks? Does your check register state both the person you are paying and the item for which you are paying?

If you can appear at the audit with files that are organized and accurate, you will be respected. An agent is likely to deal favorably with you because you are well-prepared. It is important to remain as calm as possible. Do not comment on whether the tax system is fair or mention that other people have been doing the same things and haven't been checked. Tell the truth. The end result may mean a penalty. It may mean that you have shown them the papers they need to approve your return "as is." They may also uncover a deduction you didn't claim. And you always can appeal the outcome to the IRS's Problem Resolution Office, your auditor's superviser, or to Tax Court.

These procedures can be extensive. The best way to settle things during the initial office audit is with accurate documentation. You can't determine an auditor's attitude. You have limited control over federal tax law. You can organize your records.

Spend an hour each week writing down expenses and organizing receipts and statements. Complete records not only help with an audit, they also help when the bank requests a financial statement before granting a loan. Lawyers need this information before advising you on estate planning decisions. Colleges request it before granting financial aid to your children.

Take time this spring to build, review, or re-organize your current filing system.

Master Food Preservers Needed

Would you like to develop expertise in food preservation and share your knowledge with others? Penn State Cooperative Extension has a Master Food Preservation Program that provides interested persons with in-depth instruction in food preservation in exchange for volunteer service.

The course involves 15 hours of training and covers boiling water and pressure canning, making jellies and jams, pickling and fermenting food, and freezing. Taught by Cathy Hostetler, Extension Home Economist, the course includes lectures, demonstrations, first-hand experiences, and group discussion. Each participant will receive resource materials and must pass accreditation exams before being certified.

After certification as a Master Food Preserver, participants are asked to donate 30 hours this summer and fall to promote safe food-preservation practices in their communities and county. A $30 deposit is required for the training materials and is refundable after completion of the course and volunteer service.

To request an application, send your name, address, and telephone number to Extension, P.O. Box 390, Ebensburg, PA 15931. Applications are due by April 15. Selection and notification will be made prior to the first training session which will be held during the day on Tuesday, April 30.

Busy Bees Require Hard Work For Bee Keepers

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — "Bees are like people, they never know when they have enough," said David Wampler.

Fortunately, the bee's hoarding instincts provide an abundance of honey for humans to enjoy.

Wampler and his wife Catharine have been working with bees full time since 1973. "In a bee colony, only the females work," said Wampler. I've been trying to figure out how we could carry that principal into the human society, but my wife thinks she already does all the work."

His wife shook her head. "Whatever he does, I do," Catharine said. "A lot of people don't realize it, but beekeeping is hard work."

And heavy lifting. Although the Wamplers love working with bees, they said back problems are forcing them to give it up. Their Manheim operation with its own bottling facility is for sale.

Wampler was only 10 years old when he convinced his dad to purchase three hives of bees. The first summer, he took off too much honey and the bees starved before spring.

"I learned a lot over the years with beekeeping," Wampler said. "I always tell those starting in the business that it's better to let some extra honey in the hive than to take it all out."

Bees, the Wamplers insist, are docile creatures that brandish their stingers only when provoked.

The Wamplers purchased bees by mail order and dump them into an empty hive.

"We used to feed the bees a sugar syrup to get them started," Wampler said, "but that is no longer economically feasible. Now we just take some honey from a hive that has too much."

From studies, it appears that the worker bees decide who the new queen will be when the eggs hatch. The queen bee is pampered with additional food when first hatched. When the queen is 10 days old, she soars in the air where she mates with six to eight drones. This makes her fertile for life, which is approximately two years. She lays an average of 2,000 eggs a day to replace the worker bees that live only six to eight weeks.

The queen slowly begins to lay eggs in January and lays until November. It takes 21 days for the eggs to hatch. The young bees do all the inside work while the older bees watch for robbers.

For one hive of bees to rob from the other, they must get past the guard bees. Wampler said that contrary to popular opinion, bees do not recognize who belongs in the hive, but rather recognize a robber by its actions.

"Bees always come home to the same hive. Sometimes I switch hives if one of the hives is low in honey. The guard bees never bother the bees that come in the wrong hives because the newcomers innocently act as if they belong. But robbers who try to escape with honey are stung and bitten by the guard bees. Since bees die within six hours after stinging, if enough robbers attack, they can take over the hive because the guard bees die off.

The bees die after they sting because their stingers stick in the opponent and are actually ripped from the bees' stomachs causing a rupture that results in death to the bee within six hours.

About once a month, the Wamplers check the honey combs. They wear protective clothing, that includes a netted head gear and gloves. They carry a bee smoker to chase away the bees while they check for a young, solid pattern of egg lay.

During September and October, the Wamplers remove honey from the hives. They winterize the hives to keep the mice from entering and destroying the hive.

"The bees realize they must conserve their food during the winter months so they force the drones out of the hive," said Wampler.

During the winter months, the bees cluster to keep warm. There is continuous movement since the bees in the inside of the cluster move to the outside to allow the outsiders to warm up.

Whenever the weather reaches 50 degrees, bees will fly around even if there is snow on the ground. They live from late fall until early spring if not working. When they are working, they often wear out their wings.

"Man can get nectar from a flower, but he doesn't know how to change the nectar into honey," Wampler said.

About once a month, David and Catharine Wampler check the hives to see if the bees are healthy. Wampler said that a solid pattern of egg lay show that the queen bee is doing her job.

A gallon of honey weighs 12 pounds while a gallon of water weighs only eight pounds.

The two biggest natural foes of the bee are skunks and bears, which seem oblivious to bee stings. For this reason, bees hate the color black and will sting a bee keeper dressed in black.

"If a black and a white dog attack a bee hive, the bees will sting the black dog unmercifully but let the white dog go free," Wampler claims.

A bee has two compound eyes on the side and three eyes on the top so they don't miss anything," Wampler said.

Usually only one queen bee is found in a hive. Sometimes, poor ventilation or overcrowding causes the workers to choose a new queen. The old queen and about half of the workers depart and look for a new hive. The queen and her workers will hang on a bush until the scouts locate a new hive. If they can't find one, they will attach themselves to a tree limb.

People get alarmed when they see this happening, but Wampler said that the bees will not sting when swarming. He and other beekeepers are often asked to remove a swarm of bees from property.

State police or extension agents sometimes phone the Wamplers and ask them to remove a hornet nest from a homeowner's tree. The Wamplers charge a small fee to cover the labor.

Sometimes the beekeepers take hives of bees to orchards, strawberry and cantaloupe fields where the bees are needed for pollination. Wampler said that it takes three or four hives for every acre.

When the Wamplers first started beekeeping, they kept hives in Florida during the winter and transported the hives to Pennsylvania during the summer. They placed the hives in a large trailer with a screen over the top so that the bees could circulate while traveling.

The Wamplers set up hives in many different areas and at one time had 350 hives.

"But it was too much work going back and forth and when gas prices increased, it didn't pay," Catharine said.

Since 1974, the Wamplers have been wholesaling honey at Root's Market and from their home.

"We get a lot of mail orders," she said. "We get loads of letters from tourists who purchase the honey and tell us that it is the best they ever tasted."

Honey varies greatly in flavor. "The darker the honey the stronger flavored and more nutrition it has," said Wampler who prefers the darker colors although he finds most customers prefer the lighter colored honey.

"The sad part is that some people try honey but don't like it, and then they never try it again," Wampler said. "Honey is just like apples. Some varieties I love; others I hate."

For canning, the Wamplers suggest using alfalfa honey because it has less tendency to carry the honey flavor into the fruit.

Catharine uses honey in almost everything she cooks. She said that honey keeps baked goods fresh longer and more moist. Honey recipes and a featured recipe from Catharine are printed on page B6

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Over the years, the color yellow has gotten somewhat of an unfair rap.

Yellow, for instance, often marks a warning of some sort.

Highway departments have long favored a muted, yellow-gold shade for signs running the gamut of directional and safety messages, anything from "caution" to "cattle crossing." Yellow traffic lights signal a slow down or alert us to stop for the red that flashes up next. And solid yellow lines delineate on which side of the highway we'd best drive our vehicles.

The color also comes in for some pretty negative connotations; someone perceived as less than courageous is labeled "yellow." Color of a coward.

Happy celebrations bring the red, white and blue of July 4th, the homey reds and greens of Christmas, the exiting orange of Halloween, and purples and pinks of Easter. Yellow edges into the spotlight a little at Easter, but purple overshadows it.

Yellow's image seemed doomed to an eternal ho-hum state. Then along came singer Tony Orlando belting out "Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'Round the Old Oak Tree" and gave the cheery color a deserved image boost.

Indeed, yellow's popularity soared right up there with Old Glory's red, white and blue in recent months. And millions of yards of shiny yellow ribbon wove our nation together in a bright pattern of patriotism to welcome home our nation's heroes.

I glanced out the kitchen window the other day and realized that for ages Mother Nature has likewise been "tying yellow 'round" to welcome us back to another growing season.

Slender, pliant branches of a sprawling forsythia just outside the window sway in a gentle afternoon breeze. Each waving branch is covered with clear yellow blooms, perfect and long-lasting despite the wet snow which piled among them just days before.

Sparrows squabble among the tangled yellow mass and a picture-perfect male cardinal perches on a branch, stunning scarlet contrast to the brilliance of the bush at peak bloom.

Flowering tendrils of yellow dance outside the dairy barn, as a graceful weeping willows unfurl tiny fuzzy blooms and embryonic leaves. Yellow only in brief transition, the golden willows will soon fade to green through days of stronger sunshine and lengthening light.

Daffodils dot the perennial borders with random scatterings of golden yellow, like drops of sunshine nestled in the clusters of spiked, green foliage. Some are of the old-fashioned, cluster-petaled doubles, descendants of colonies which grew on the bank long before our arrival on this farm. Many are the solid yellow singles, the "classic" daffodil.

My favorite, though, opens creamy white petals with a dainty, pale-yellow cup. Each cup is deeply crimped and scalloped-edged, like miniature ballet tutus for the mythical fairies which are supposed to inhabit gardens.

A few brave dandelion blooms peek out of sheltered corners, opening wide their yellow blossoms to soak up the warming sunshine. Within a week or two, the lawn will be temporarily polka-dotted with cheerful dandelion blooms. Whether dandelions are weeds or valuable, edible, nutritious, flowering plants can be hotly debated.

Still, none of those dandelions now dotting the landscape is our first of the season, having been long beaten by a single precocious one which flowered back in early January. Or maybe that one was just running way late from last year.

Fluttering around the finch feeder are as many as ten goldfinches at a time, jostling for perches at the supply of oil sunflower seeds. In varying stages of color change, their feathering ranges from pure neon yellow to just the faintest hint of sunny overcast to their gray winter plumage.

Once associated with cowardice, yellow seems much more fitting as a symbol of hope and welcome and celebration.

The Wamplers process their own honey by heating the liquid that gravity feeds through a cheesecloth for straining before being bottled.

"Our process is slow compared with commercial processes, but we think it tastes better because it is not filtered," said Wampler.

"We love working with bees," Wampler said. "But with our back problems and my allergy to smoke, we're going to have to quit it."

Wampler plans to buy a steer farm where his children Ruth, 21; Wilbur, 19; Marlin, 16; and Melvin, 14; will help with the heavy work.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

The first asparagus of the season is a special treat. Microwave it until just tender-crisp. Then, top it with freshly ground black pepper and a tiny bit of butter or a sprinkle of lemon juice.

When you're tired of asparagus that way, try it with other ingredients and seasonings. It goes well in countless combinations to make elegant vegetable dishes and tempting salads. Try today's recipes and see. But first, here's a brief review of basic cooking directions.

Be cautious about cooking time. Fresh asparagus, especially thin spears, can overcook quickly. A pound of room temperature (or fresh-from-the-garden) pencil-thin asparagus pieces (three to four cups) cooks to tender-crisp in as little as 2½ to 3 minutes. Thick asparagus spears and refrigerated asparagus need more cooking time — but not much more. A pound of medium spears (half-inch diameter stems) cooks in three to four minutes. Ideally, asparagus should be the same thickness for even cooking. If you can, select spears from an open bin at your supermarket or try to pick a package of even-sized spears. When sorting asparagus from your garden, group thin spears together for one recipe and thick spears together for another recipe.

If you don't have the ideal even-size pieces, you can still have evenly cooked asparagus. For asparagus pieces, cut the quicker-cooking tip ends slightly longer than stem ends and be sure to stir halfway through cooking.

For asparagus spears, arrange spears correctly before cooking. Thicker spears and stem ends should be put towards the outside edges of the cooking dish. Tip ends and thin spears should be toward center of dish. If necessary to even out sizes, split stem ends that are thicker than a half-inch.

Add just a small amount of water and cover the dish tightly, using plastic wrap or a tight-fitting lid. Stir pieces or rearrange spears halfway through cooking. Cook the minimum time and allow for continued cooking during standing time. After a couple of minutes of standing time, check for final doneness. If you're adding salt, sprinkle it on after cooking.

Today's recipes feature asparagus to serve as a hot vegetable and as a cold salad. The first, Asparagus Spears with Deluxe Orange Sauce, is a way to serve fresh asparagus in a most elegant manner. The fancier spears are used. (Ends can be saved for making the salad, asparagus soup or for your favorite asparagus recipes.) The low-calorie sauce has a wonderful rich flavor—almost like a calorie-laden Maltaise sauce (which is like Hollandaise sauce, but made with orange juice and peel). And, it's very easy and almost fool- proof to make — unlike regular Maltaise sauce, which can easily curdle.

Second, there's Greek Asparagus Salad, a wonderful combination of flavors for a side or main dish salad. This calls simply for microwaving the asparagus until barely tender-crisp and stirring in other ingredients. If you don't like Greek flavors, follow the variation and make California Asparagus Salad.

And, if neither of these appeals to you, just microwave fresh asparagus according to the hints and recipes, add a few other seasonings and enjoy the unique flavor of this springtime delicacy.

Asparagus Spears with Deluxe Orange Sauce

1½ pounds asparagus (24 to 30 medium spears, about ½ -inch diameter)
3 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
½ cup plain non-fat yogurt
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
½ cup fresh orange juice
1 tablespoon butter or margarine (optional)
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
Dash ground white pepper and salt
Orange slices, optional

Rinse asparagus well. Snap off tough ends and discard. Hold tips evenly together and cut off bottom ends so spears are about 6 inches long. (Save remaining ends for another use.) Place asparagus in microwavable 6xll-inch rectangular dish or loaf dish, arranging so asparagus tips are to center and stem ends to outside edges of dish. Add water and thyme; cover with plastic wrap. Microwave (High) 5 to 6 minutes or until tender-crisp when pierced with fork. (If necessary, re-arrange pieces halfway through cooking.) Let stand covered while making sauce.

Stir yogurt and flour together until smooth in a microwavable 4-cup measure; stir in orange juice, orange peel and butter, if used. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes, stirring after each minute, or until thick and starting to bubble. If desired, season with pepper and salt. Drain asparagus and arrange on serving plate. If desired, garnish with orange slices. Pass sauce to serve over asparagus. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Greek Asparagus Salad

1 to 1½ pounds asparagus (16 to 20 medium spears, about ½ -inch diameter)
2 tablespoons water
½ teaspoon dried oregano leaves
¼ cup salad oil
¼ cup white wine vinegar ½ to ¾ cup pitted small black olives
½ to ¾ cup (2 to 3 ounces) crumbled feta cheese
Freshly ground black pepper
Salt, optional

Rinse asparagus well. Snap off tough stem ends and discard. Cut tip ends 2 inches long and remaining stems 1½ -inches long. There should be about 4 cups. Place asparagus, water and oregano in a microwavable 1½ -quart casserole. Cover with plastic wrap or lid. Microwave (High) 3 to 4 minutes or until asparagus is barely tender, stirring after 2 minutes. Let stand, covered, 2 minutes. Do not drain; stir in oil and vinegar. Cool and stir in remaining ingredients. Season to taste with freshly ground black pepper and salt, if used. Refrigerate several hours for flavors to blend. Serve cold. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Each serving — ⅛ of recipe: 109 calories.

Cooking With Honey

Honey is a natural, unrefined food that is safe and wholesome. Honey may be purchased in a variety of forms such as liquid, combs, chunk, cut comb, and creamed.

The flavor and color of honey depends upon the bee's nectar source. The color varies from white to dark amber. The darker the color, the fuller the flavor.

Store liquid honey in a cool, dry place, but do not refrigerate for this hastens granulation. If honey has solidified, place the container in a pan of hot water until all crystals are melted.

Honey contains vitamins and minerals including thiamine, riboflavin, iron, potassium, and calcium.

In recipes that call for sugar, you may substitute honey by using ⅔ cup for 1 cup of sugar. Lower the baking temperature by 25 degrees.

The Pennyslvania Beekeepers Association suggests that when honey is substituted for sugar in baked goods, add ¼ to ¼ teaspoon baking powder for each cup of honey used.

Honey needs no preservatives. It keeps best in a tightly covered container stored in a cool, dark place. In a uncovered container, honey loses flavor and aroma and absorbs moisture.

Catharine Wampler who said that she uses honey in almost everything she cooks, stresses that honey should definitely be used in cakes and cookies because honey absorbs and retains moisture, keeping baked products fresh longer.

Two tablespoons of honey added to your favorite cake mix will make the cake more tender and less crumbly.

In this issue, read the articles about the Wampler's and Lee Schleicher's beekeeping.

POTATO BUNS

3 sticks margarine
¾ cup honey
4 eggs
3 teaspoons salt
1 pint mashed potatoes
2 packages yeast dissolved in 1 cup lukewarm water
1 pint of lukewarm water
4½ pounds of flour

Combine all ingredients and mix together by hand. Let dough rise in large bowl. When dough is doubled in size, punch down with hand. Let rise again until doubled in size; punch down. Take one half of the dough and roll out until ¼ -inch thick. Cut with round cookie cutters. Place on cookie sheets and let rise until doubled. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes.

1¼ cups shortening
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg, well-beaten
5 tablespoons water, cold
1 tablespoon cider vinegar

Cut shortening into flour and salt. Combine egg, water, and vinegar. Pour all at once into flour mixture. Stir with fork. Roll on lightly floured board. This crust may be re-rolled without getting tough. Dough may be refrigerated for two weeks.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Today is Saturday the thirteenth and not Friday the thirteenth, which is supposed to be bad luck.

A few weeks ago my husband wanted to go to a Saturday sale, and, as I must do most of the driving just now, I reluctantly went along. This was a sale held by a distant relative. My husband not only bought a few items but also had a chance to visit.

It was a rainy day, but despite the weather a large crowd attended and the cars lined the road in both directions. I found a nice flat spot to park and got off the road. Then we walked in a muddy lane with an open umbrella over our heads. The mud pulled the rubbers right off my feet. In the house one room was filled with small items in boxes and on trays— an accumulation of many years. Curious folks handled the things and rearranged the books and dishes.

Rain and more rain fell and when I went to move the car I could not! The ground was very soft and someone had parked broadside directly behind me. There was nothing to do but to call a tow truck. So, while my husband sat in the car, I walked in a farm lane where several pickup trucks were parked, but I found no one at home. I continued my hunt for a telephone by walking to a new house up a hill along the road.

Here a kind lady helped me contact the AAA. But, I discovered that we would have to pay the tow truck as we couldn't say the engine did not work. So, I dragged my soaked self back to the car to wait. Finally the truck came and lifted our car out of the tight squeeze that it was in.

It was a day that I'd just as soon forget. But, one can always say, "It could have been worse."

To serve, put 1 tablespoon of the ginger extract into a glass with ice and seltzer. Stir.

Dandelion Jelly

Pick 1 quart dandelion blossoms without stems. Wash them and boil them in 1 quart water for 3 minutes. Drain off 3 cups liquid. Add 1¼ box Sure Jell or pectin, 1 teaspoon lemon or orange extract and 4½ cups sugar. Boil together about 3 minutes.

Families Needed For 4-H Guiding Paws

Delaware 4-H Clubs are looking for families with children ages 9-19 interested in helping the blind by joining the Guiding Paws program and raising guide dog puppies for the Seeing Eye.

Guiding Paws is part of the Seeing Eye Puppy Project, a joint effort of the Seeing Eye,Inc. of Morristown, NJ and the 4-H Clubs.

Interested families will receive an eight to twelve-week-old German Shepherd or Labrador Retriever to raise until it is a year old. At approximately one year, the dog is returned to the Seeing Eye where it receives guide training and becomes the "eyes" for a blind man or woman from the United States or Canada.

Once a family agrees to raise a puppy, it is their responsibility to provide proper discipline, love and companionship in order for it to grow into a healthy and friendly dog that will be easily trained. They and the puppy will participate in 4-H activities such as train rides, shopping trips, movies, and bowling, which enable the puppy to become accustomed to public places where it must go as a guide dog. The Seeing Eye and 4-H also hold camps and competitions for 4-H'ers and puppies which help in the training of the dogs.

There is no cost for the program and all expenses, including food and veterinarian bills, are borne by the Seeing Eye, Inc.

Bee Keeper Claims Bees Relieve Stress, Aches, Pains

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

It's no wonder. His beard, which reaches almost to his waist, is formed by about 3,000 honey bees.

To grow a bee beard, Schleicher, who is 57, said that a queen bee is stuck into a small cage with a screen. Strings attached to the cage are tied around Schleicher's ears to hold the cage on his chin. Colonies of bees are released and settle on Schleicher's face so that they can be near the queen bee.

Cotton is stuffed in Schleicher's ears and nose to keep the bees from entering.

"Sometimes I need to spit a few out of my mouth," Schleicher said.

"I guess I'm either daring or crazy to do it," Schleicher said, "but at bee conventions there are usually more volunteers who want to participate than needed."

The purpose of forming a bee beard is to prove to the public that bees are not as dangerous as people believe. Consequently people won't kill a bee every time they see one.

He regrets that many bee conventions no longer sponsor the event because they can't get insurance to cover it. Still, Schleicher maintains that the feat is not dangerous.

"The secret to keep from getting stung is to remain calm and move slowly," he said.

If he gets a few stings in the process, Schleicher is not alarmed.

"It's healthy for you," he said.

So healthy, Schleicher believes, that he offers therapeutic bee stings to people who suffer from rheumatory arthritis, bursitis, gout, and sore joints.

A bee's venom supposedly causes the body to produce an anti-inflammatory agent that will counteract the poison and has the pain-killing effect of cortisone.

Schleicher heard about the healing powers of bee venom in 1985 when he had a degenerate hip and needed to use a cane. Following the suggestions from a speaker he heard at a bee seminar, Schleicher held a bee at his hip and knee joints to sting him every other day.

"After a week or two, I had no more pain and no longer needed a cane," Schleicher said.

He admits that most people are skeptical of the unorthodox method of treating illnesses, but he has a loyal following from those who have tried his method and found relief.

Schleicher's most prominent patient is University of Charleston catcher Jack Goddess who opted for the bee remedy in 1989. The baseball catcher had suffered an injury diagnosed as rotator cuff impingement in his right shoulder. Frustrated with the agony of pain and of missing out on the playing season, Goddess sought medical treatment but found no relief.

His father, a railroad engineer who works with Schleicher, told his son about the bee sting theory.

"I'll try anything at this point," Goddess said.

Schleicher placed a few bees from his bee hives in a jar. With a tweezers, he captured one and held the bee on Goddess's shoulder, which had previously been cooled with an ice cube.

"Ice takes the initial shock of a sting away even though you can still feel the penetration," he said. After a 20-minute wait to make sure that Goddess did not have an allergic reaction, Schleicher administered three more stings.

"Generally a person can take 500 to 800 stings before the venon kills a person, but all it takes is one sting if the person is allergic," he said.

Schleicher gave Goddess a jar full of bees so that he could apply the bees himself. Goddess's friends were amazed and eager to administer the stings. After cutting the daily dosage back to about three or four stings a sitting, twice a week, Goddess returned to the playing field and moved from ninth place to fifth in the batting order.

"I know it sounds outrageous," Goddess said, "but I feel 10 times better."

While many countries recognize bee stings as a viable cure to treat pain, Schleicher said that the U.S. is slower in endorsing this method. Schleicher is pleased that many M.D.'s will be attending a Boston convention, American Apitherapy Society Incorporated, this summer to learn about the method.

While the medicinal values of bee stings for humans are debated, Schleicher is more concerned with the diseases that are afflicting bees. Schleicher, who has 43 hives, said that he lost 15 colonies this year to tracheal varroa mite. The parasite lives in the throat of a bee and weakens it until the bee dies. According to Schleicher the larva started in Europe, was brought to the southern states, and has now traveled north.

"I don't buy bees out of state because it's too dangerous," he said, "but the mite got here anyway."

With the help of the extension agent and a state bee keeper examiner, Schleicher plans to have the cones treated with menthol so that they can be reused.

"A 3-pound starter hive kit costs $109 to $150," Schleicher said. With 43 hives, Schleicher sometimes gets more than one ton of honey from the bees. He heats it in an 80-gallon stainless steel tank to 130 degrees and strains it with a nylon mesh. The honey is stored in five gallon buckets and bottled when needed. Although his wife, Carolyn, doesn't help with the bees, she did take a short course in beekeeping from Delaware Valley College. Her husband took a beekeeping course from Penn State.

"Beekeeping is a good past time. It keeps me out of trouble," Schleicher said. "When you're working with the bees, you need to concentrate on what you're doing. Bees are a good way to get rid of stress, aches, and pains."

Schleicher may be contacted at 308 Walnut St., Catasauqua, PA 18032, or call (215) 266-1772.

With about 3,000 forming his beard, Lee Schleicher said, "It's a buggy, crawly feeling." To keep from getting stung, Schleicher said that the main thing is to remain calm and enjoy it.

Beekeepers perform the bee beard stunt to show the public that bees are not as dangerous as many believe. "We don't want people killing a bee everytime they see one," Schleicher said.

FOOD SHOPPING TIPS FOR NEWLYWEDS

Food shopping may be a novel experience for a newly married couple. You will want to please your tastes and your pocketbook. But where should you start?

First of all you should have some idea of how much it is going to cost to feed two people, week in and week out. According the the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) cost of food estimates, a young couple will spend anywhere from $60 a week for a low cost food plan to $92 a week for a liberal food plan. This assumes all meals are eaten at home or carried from home.

If the two of you are working and buying lunches, you will spend considerably less on groceries. These figures do not include money spent for soap, cigarettes, paper goods, pet food and other non-food items. Non-food spending will account for about 25 cents of every dollar you spend in the supermarket.

To feel confident when you shop, it is a good idea to plan your shopping before you go to the store. Assuming you have already made a couple of trips to the store and have stocked up on basic items for those first important meals, check your cupboards, refrigerator and freezer and know what you have on hand. Read and study the foods ads in the newspaper and plan your menus around what you have in stock and the weekly foods specials. Make a list and stick to it. Don't give in to temptation. Impulse buying cannot be eliminated entirely but give second thought to items you may want that are not on your list.

The following tips may help you stay within your budget:

* Shop alone. Shopping with a spouse, friend or neighbor can result in unplanned purchases.

* Do not shop when you are hungry. Surveys have proven that hungry shoppers spend more.

* Clip and use cents-off coupons from newspapers, magazines and food cartons for those items on your list. Do not overlook or pass up refund offers.

* Get to know the layout and the location of items in the store you shop most frequently. You can organize your list and shop the aisles systematically with no backtracking or lost time. Every time you backtrack you are tempted to buy items not on your list.

* Know the psychology of food placement that retailers use to get you to loosen your purse strings. Many of the items you will have on your shopping list will be "power items" or "demand items," items that are used to pull you through an aisle. These items will often be placed on a shelf where you have to stoop or reach to select. Items at eye level are reserved for those things you do not have on your list.

Think for a minute where the white bread is located — usually on the bottom shelf. Specialty breads or fancy pastries are reserved for eye level.

* Watch out for mass displays at the end of aisles that are often multiple priced such as "two for" or "three for." These items may not be reduced. Get to know regular prices and compare between brands.

* Try store brands and the "no name" generic products. They are packed by the national brands companies and cost less because they are not advertised as the name brands are.

* Buy according to use. Within brands, be they name or store brand, you have a choice of prices and qualities for many products. For example, whole peeled tomatoes versus stewed, fancy mushrooms versus those with stems and pieces, fruit in heavy syrup or light, tuna in oil or water.

* Get to know the butcher and the produce manager. They can steer you to the best buy and quality.

* Shop the meat specials regularly and seriously. Stock your freezer with specials and plan menus from what you have on hand.

These are just a few tips to help you get started. More materials are available from your Penn State Cooperative Extension Office. Help is available simply for the asking.

Experts Stress, Let Kids Be Kids

New York, NY — Undue amounts of pressure on children may be robbing them of their precious childhood years.

Parents and care givers need guidance for protecting childhood and establishing the proper environment for learning, eating and physical activity, according to a panel of childhood experts who addressed "A Generation Under Pressure — Growing Up in the 90s," sponsored by National Dairy Council.

Inappropriate expectations, growing out of a lack of understanding of developmental needs, impose unhealthy pressures on parents and children and distort childhood, the panel concluded.

"Parents and professionals are struggling with information overload," said Tab Forgac, M.S., R.D., vice president, Nutrition Education and Public Affairs for NDC.

The Coalition for Healthy Children offers a single set of practical principles to guide childhood. It is based on the diverse expertise of the panel and its goal is to help nutritionists, pediatricians and child educators in their work with families.

Cutting Through Mixed Messages

According to Mary Abbott Hess, M.S., R.D., president of the American Dietetic Association, The role of the parent or caregiver is to be sensitive to the child's individual likes and dislikes while providing opportunities to enrich the senses and expand food experiences. Children must be recognized as unique, growing individuals with emotional, mental and physical needs.

To illustrate societal pressure on eating behavior, Dr. Elkind cites the case of fourth grade girls who diet to fit into their designer jeans.

As a society we have come to imagine that it is good for young people to mature rapidly. Yet we do our children harm when we hurry them through childhood.

Making childhood fitness fun

Also acknowledging the prevalence of overweight, out-of-shape children, panel member Stephen Rice, M.D., Ph.D., M.P.H., of the University of Washington, said that management of wellness consists of physical fitness, nutrition, stress, personal habits, and family environment.

"Yes," he agreed, "Children need to exercise more, but what we are observing is two extremes: the couch potato kid who sits in front of the television for hours on end and the three-year-old Olympian who may injure his developing bones and muscles."

Dr. Rice maintains that competitive distortions can make fitness a win/lose versus a win/win situation.

"We're pushing kids across the line to do activities that aren't fun. The issue should be about fun."

Perhaps the most fundamental aspect of parental involvement in the growth and development of children is addressed by Ellyn Satter, M.S.W., R.D. of the Family Therapy Center of Madison, who maintains that mealtime is a division of responsibility.

Parents should focus on the feeding relationship rather than on getting food into the child.

Meet The Master Gardeners

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — If you sat down and counted it all up, the estimated value of time given by the 1989-1990 Penn State Master Gardeners class in Lancaster Co. was more than $6,700 — not bad, considering the phone calls, the visits, the meetings, and the media interviews. Diplomas were awarded last week to nine graduates of the program, which involved more than 630 hours of learning how to germinate, grow, green, garden, and glean the best plants, vegetables, lawns, trees, and, ultimately, gardens. NY-PENN Spring Homemakers Day

CORNELL, NY — The NY-PENN Spring Homemakers' Day, sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension of Bradford County and Cornell Cooperative Extension of Tioga County, New York, is planned for Thursday, April 25.

The program will be held at the Guthrie Inn in Sayre, from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., with registration beginning at 9:30 a.m. A buffet brunch will be served.

Program topics for the event will include How Safe Is Our Food Supply, presented by Kerry Hoffman, Project Assistant in Pesticide Education at Penn State University. Ms. Hoffman will talk about the issue of pesticides in our food supply. During her presentation, she will explain the federal system of checks to assure the safety of our food, explain what a pesticide must go through to be registered for use on food crops, and share 1990 Food and Drug Administration test results for pesticide residues in and on foods. She will also give suggestions on how consumers can reduce any existing pesticide residues in and on foods, and answer questions from the audience.

Jane Darling, of Jane Darling Tax Service in Appalachin, New York, will talk on Procrastination-The Hidden Sin.

This year's program has taken on a change in that a brunch will be served in place of the traditional lunch and morning snack. The brunch menu will include orange and pineapple juice, danish, blueberry muffins, bagels, fruit cup, scrambled eggs, waffles with honey, blueberry or maple syrup, bacon, ham, and beverages.

The cost to attend the NY-PENN Homemakers' Day program is $8. Reservations are required and should be made by Thursday, April 18. To make a reservation, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension, 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda, PA 18848, phone (717) 265-2896 or Cornell Cooperative Extension, 56 Main Street, Owego, NY 13827, phone (607) 687-4020.

Caregivers To Be Trained

Penn State Cooperative Extension and York Area Agency of Aging is seeking caring individuals, young and old, who are willing to help caregivers of an older or disabled family member. These volunteers would provide caregivers with information regarding community resources, stress, and tips about personal care.

The training sessions will be held April 23, 30, and May 7. Volunteers will be trained about the aging process and how to ease some of the stresses of caregiving.

Baskets 'N More Weaves Niche In Marketplace

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (LANCASTER Co.) — While many home businesses bloom and falter, Phebe Good's basket business keeps on growing.

"I started my business by default," said this former farm wife, who wove her first basket seven years ago during a visit with a South Carolina friend.

"I wasn't overly thrilled about weaving it," said Phebe, who always enjoys making things. But after a few more tries, weaving became a relaxing experience.

Soon people were asking Phebe to make baskets. She put some on consignment in craft shops and also participated in a few craft shows.

Because she worked part time in a craft shop, her time was limited. Her schedule soon forced her to choose between basket making or her job in the craft store. She chose to give up her part-time store job and concentrate on basket weaving.

That was five years ago. Today, her Baskets 'n More business is more than a full-time job for Phebe. In addition, she has several part-time people working for her.

"Weaving is relaxing," Phebe said. Her designs are original and often have patterns woven into them or are decorated with stenciling.

The magazine basket that may be hung on the wall is one of the customers' favorite baskets. Phebe said that she tries to offer new designs each season.

Most of her baskets are original designs. "I try not to copy other people's baskets unless someone requests a specific one for me to do," she said.

She uses flat, oval, and round reed and ash to make the baskets. Country and Victorian baskets are decorated with reed curls, stenciled or have a decorative design woven into them.

Phebe has tried commercial stains for the baskets, but has settled on making her own stain. "It's messier to do, but I like the color better than commercial stains," she said.

To make her own stains, she collects black walnuts, selects the hulls and places them in water that is heated, then dips the baskets in the stain.

"When I first decided to concentrate on basket weaving, I tried to think of creative ways to market the baskets and I thought of inviting guests to a home party," said Phebe.

Her first home party was held five years ago. She was amazed when several guests requested that she have a basket party at their home. Since then, demand has escalated.

The show offers baskets in all sizes and shapes plus items she takes on consignment such as fabric rabbits, bears, and cows, wreaths, and wooden shelves.

"I don't push my products; they sell themselves," she said. "I don't

To sell the baskets she made, Phebe had a home party to display them. That was five years ago. She now averages three parties a week and has needed to hire other weavers to fill orders.

Baskets 'N More

With the basket weaving, party demonstrating, delivery, and bookkeeping, Phebe said, her Baskets 'N More business is more than a full-time job for herself. In addition, she has some part-time weavers and another woman who holds basket demonstrations.

When she's in a jam, her husband, Don, helps with packing and delivery. Her son, Tim, 13, also helps with the packing. And when her daughter Katrina, 18, "is in dire need of money, she helps weave." The Good's two oldest children, Ed, 25; and Lavon, 22; are married.

Phebe said, "The nice part of the job is that it offers a variety. Weaving is relaxing to me although I would not want to do it full time. I'm glad I can use my bookkeeping skills, and I like meeting people."

The down side of working out of your home, Phebe said, is that the work is always here and people often ask you to do things, because you're home.

"I learned to say 'no.' Sometimes pressure builds up when there are many orders to fill, but Phebe said that overall, having your own business has definite advantages.

Because her business evolved without much planning, Phebe said that after her business was established, she read a book about starting your own business and was relieved that she basically did everything right.

"I got business cards, invoices with my name and price sheets," she said. One thing she does not have is a computer. She has been reluctant to get one since she has never used one, but she said her business is at the point where she really needs to invest the money and time in getting one.

An upstairs bedroom has been converted into her work room. It contains all the supplies and the working space that Phebe needs to make baskets. The reed is soaked in a dishpan of water to make it more pliable for weaving. Staining is done in the garage during winter and outside during the summer.

Some hostesses prefer to have drop-in parties, which makes it easier for Phebe since it does not require her to spend an evening demonstrating. On the other hand, she said, "It's rewarding to go to a party and see how thrilled the guests are with baskets."

Basket parties are not limited to female hostesses. Recently, a man booked a party and invited his fellow firemen to order baskets for Easter gifts. "Wives were delighted. Several called me and ordered more baskets," Phebe said.

Most of her guests are working women and she finds that younger women are inclined to spend more money because they don't have as many things to fill their homes.

She said, "I'm amazed at how high sales are. I feel no effects of a recession. Orders have increased; in fact, it's been like Christmas.

"The secret to a successful business is perseverance, and the attitude that the customer is always right," Phebe said.

"I'm at a point where I need to decide whether or not to branch out or keep it small. I considered having a catalogue printed, but it would soon be outdated because I keep adding new basket styles."

Presently, Phebe has photographs of baskets that she labels for hostesses who want to take orders before the party. For those who request unusual-shaped baskets, Phebe will weave according to their specifications for an additional $3 special order charge.

Phebe also teaches basket weaving for craft stores, churches, and Mother's programs.

York Extension To Teach Parents How To Live With Teens

Do you, or the parents of teens that you know, sometimes wish your teens and pre-teens could be sent away for a few years and then returned to you as cooperative young adults? Or maybe, as the parents of teens, you and your friends just want some direction on how to guide adolescents through their most troublesome years. Well, now there's help - an innovative video-based parent education program designed specifically for parents of teens - and pre-teens. Called Active Parenting of Teens, the program is being sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension starting Wednesday, April 17 and continues through May 22.

Active Parenting of Teens will be taught in six, two-hour sessions by Lois Kinzie, private parent education consultant. The program features over 60 video vignettes on issues both relevant and timely to raising a teenager, including how to prevent substance abuse and how to openly discuss sexuality. After viewing the various scenarios, parents participate in group discussion, role plays and other activities.

Active Parenting of Teens is not psychotherapy, but rather a common-sense approach to parenting. There is not dwelling on blame, only a move-ahead attitude that shows it is never too late to improve parent-child relationships.

In addition to the sessions dealing with substance abuse and teenager sexuality, Active Parenting of Teens includes vignettes on: instilling courage and self-esteem; developing responsibility; and winning cooperation through communication. The realistic video sequences stir reactions like, "Yes, that's just how I feel" or "That's our teenager, all right," and demonstrate positive ways to resolve conflict.

To sign up for the Active Parenting of Teens program, call Penn State Cooperative Extension at 757-9657. The cost of the program is $15.00 per participant, or $25.00 per couple. The first session will be held Wednesday, April 17, 7:00 p.m. at the Extension Meeting Room, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York with subsequent sessions to be held over the course of the following five weeks.

For further information about Active Parenting of Teens, call 757-9657.

Garlic Lowers Risk Of Cancer, Heart Disease

Eating more garlic — assuming your friends can stand it — may help you stay healthy, according to new scientific evidence from researchers at Penn State and elsewhere.

Nutrition department head Dr. John Milner and faculty member Dr. Yu-Yan Yeh were among 40 scientists from 15 countries who delivered papers last August at the First World Congress on the Health Significance of Garlic and Garlic Constituents. The data presented by Milner and Yeh suggest that garlic shows promise for lowering the risk of both cancer and heart disease.

Penn State was one of three cosponsors of the conference, held in Washington, D.C. Many of the findings presented had not yet been published in scientific journals, but because this was the first gathering ever of garlic researchers, it attracted worldwide media attention.

Most of Milner's research in the past 15 years has focused on the anti-cancer effects of the nutrient selenium, which is found in garlic and other foods. Milner became interested in garlic itself two years ago when a physician colleague from China, Dr. Jinzhou Liu, showed him data suggesting that garlic inhibited the formation of nitrosamines, which can be powerful carcinogens. (Liu is now pursuing a Ph.D. in nutrition at Penn State.)

In his own studies, Milner found that garlic may help reduce the incidence of breast cancer. After injecting laboratory rats with large doses of a chemical known to cause breast cancer, he added garlic powder to their diets, and saw a reduction of up to 70 percent in the number of mammary tumors. "That's a massive decrease by any standard," he says.

Scientists believe that carcinogens usually operate by binding to the body's DNA and changing normal cells into cancer cells. Garlic seems to prevent charcinogens from binding to DNA, Milner's study suggests. "We don't know the exact mechanism by which this happens," says Milner, who plans to look for that mechanism in future studies.

Milner says his own work and studies at other institutions have produced "overwhelming" evidence supporting the anti-carcinogenic effect of garlic. "It's been shown effective in both prevention and therapy," he says, "and it's been shown effective for not only breast tumors but also lung and colon tumors."

Garlic also may play a role in preventing heart disease, according to data presented by Yeh, associate professor of nutrition. In studies with rats, Yeh found that garlic consumption could lower levels of cholesterol and triglycerides in the blood by 20 and 30 percent, respectively. High cholesterol and triglyceride levels are a risk factor for coronary heart disease.

The amount of garlic used in the Penn State studies was considerable: Garlic made up 2 percent of the rat's diet in Yeh's study, and in Milner's research the highest concentration was 4 percent, or the equivalent of seven to ten cloves of garlic per day for humans. While neither Yeh nor Milner is recommending that Americans eat garlic in such great quantities, people in some parts of the world do consume that much.

"People in the United States don't include a lot of garlic in their diets, compared to people in other countries," Milner points out. "The largest garlic consumption is among people in Italy, India, Japan, China, and Korea. They have an entirely different cancer susceptibility than Americans, and they don't suffer from colon, breast, and lung cancer to the extent we do in this country."

The international conference was sponsored by the Nutrition International Co. and co-sponsored by Penn State and the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Funding for Milner's and Yeh's research comes from Penn State and from federal and private sources.

The Mature Adult Seminar Home-Based Business Seminar

On Saturday, April 20, Barbara Davis, Ph.D., Associate Professor Penn State College of Agriculture will present, "Dependence-Independence and Interdependence" at Spring Conference 1991: The Mature Adult.

"Most of us highly value our independence. But there is more to consider," states Barbara Davis.

The conference is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and Wilkes University. It will be held at the Arnaud C. Marts Center, Wilkes University. Faculty from Penn State, Wilkes University and Kings College will be discussing the normal changes associated with aging, communicating and socializing with the mature adult, and the nutritional needs.

Persons who attend will have information to better understand the aging process, learn how to better communicate and socialize with mature adults, and gain knowledge about the nutritional needs. Participants will receive a subscription to "Keeping Up," a bimonthly newsletter written by Barbara Davis and Penn State Nutrition in the Life Cycle, Food for Folks Over 50 publication.

Registration fee is $10.50 which includes a breakfast buffet. For a Registration brochure call Penn State Cooperative Extension at 825-1701.

How Much TV Is Too Much?

Television programming that is designed with the child in mind can provide some very delightful ways to gain new and different information. Television, like anything else, can be over-used.

Here are some suggestions for parents to think about if television viewing by their children is in excess:

1. Change TV habits of the entire family by sponsoring more family-type activities such as games or walks that would take the child and other family members away from the television set. Springtime is a good time to start something new.

2. Encourage the child to involve himself or herself with hobbies such as postmark or stamp collecting, music lessons, or other activities that young people enjoy.

3. Decide on a maximum time length for television watching for each individual member of the family. This is best by involving the entire family in making this decision.

4. Encourage children to invite friends and associates over to their house to play on a regular basis.

5. Encourage all family members to avoid random-viewing — just turning on the set to see what might be playing. Much less television will be watched if the random-viewing type searching for something to do is stopped. Family members should be encouraged to plan their television viewing as well as planning other activities.

6. Parents need to view with the child selected television programs and discuss the content of the program. If the program supports the family's values and ideals, then it provides a forum for discussion.

Bucks-Montgomery Seek Dairy Princess Contestants

Any single young woman, between 16 and 24 years of age, whose parents or guardians are or have been engaged in dairy farming within the last five years is eligible to compete. A young woman is also eligible if she herself owns at least two dairy animals in a bona fide 4-H or FFA program, or is a dairy farm employee, or is a daughter of a dairy industry employee.

The Bucks-Montgomery Dairy Princess Pageant is scheduled for June 1, at the Richland Mall in Quakertown. The pageant marks the first time that the former Bucks County and Montgomery County Dairy Promotion Committees have joined forces to promote milk and dairy products throughout the two counties.

To acquaint candidates with the opportunities of being a dairy princess, the promotion committee is sponsoring a social on April 13 from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the David and Sharon Bishop farm, Curley Hill Road, in Doylestown. Committee members and current Bucks County Dairy Princess Mary Beth Landis will explain what the program entails and the benefits involved.

Miss Landis of Perkasie encourages eligible young women to compete for the title. "Being a dairy princess has given me a better understanding of the importance of dairy products in our diet and opened my eyes to what the dairy industry is doing," she said. "It gave me great satisfaction in knowing that I was able to encourage children as well as adults to drink milk and eat nutritiously."

The experience, Miss Landis added, offered a "great opportunity to affect many, many lives in a positive way." In addition, it was a "real challenge to be more and do more than the average girl would do," she said, explaining that her duties included appearances at schools, malls, grocery stores and county fairs and talks before farm and non-farm groups.

Young women interested in attending the April 13 social and/or learning more about the Bucks-Montgomery Dairy Princess contest should contact Laura England, chairman, at (215) 322-0200, or Linda Sterner, vice chairman, at (215) 754-6241.

Water Conservation In The Vegetable Garden

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Don't let the water emergency keep you from planning this spring's vegetable garden. There is a safe source of water you can use for your garden.

It's called greywater, and it's water you've already used for washing dishes or for doing laundry or bathing.

You can save this water by siphoning it out of the tub or wash basin into 5-gallon paint cans or 20-gallon plastic trash cans.

It's perfectly safe to use on your vegetable garden, or on your lawn and shrubs. Just don't get it on your fruits and vegetables. When using greywater in the vegetable garden, be sure to put it on the soil, not on the plants.

If you are growing lettuce and strawberries or letting your cucumbers and tomatoes run, be especially careful not to get greywater on the plants. Use an irrigation trench, bury your drip irrigation tubes under mulch, or if you're using a watering can, apply a thick organic mulch and water under the mulch. Don't water over the vegetables. Mulches will also let you use less water in your vegetable garden.

Beef Industry Gains TV Spots

CHICAGO, IL — Consumers nationwide will see nearly three dozen additional television commercials from the beef industry campaign as a result of an unprecedented soft advertising market and savvy negotiations.

The "soft" marketplace — a reduction of television advertising demand — netted a return of $1 million from funds originally allocated at projected rates for prime-time advertising in eight key consumer markets. As a result, beef television ads will be seen in prime time nationally, rather than only in the selected markets.

Additionally, negotiations for a reinvestment purchase resulted in a 50 percent savings for 32 network television spots. The savings offset the typical high costs of national prime-time advertising.

Last December and January, the reinvestment purchase accounted for 21 advertising spots on such high-profile broadcasts as the Hall of Fame Bowl, Rose Bowl, Citrus Bowl and Hula Bowl collegiate football games, six professional football playoff games, two collegiate basketball games and the National Hockey League All-Star game.

The next advertising flight will include 10 additional spots during the first two weeks of April as a part of the re-investment purchase. The ads will appear on Law & Order, Unsolved Mysteries, Empty Nest, Matlock, Carol & Co., Dark Shadows, the NBC Monday Movie and Jane Pauley.

Brochure Answers Veal Concerns

CHICAGO, IL—"Supermarket and restaurant managers often are the first to get questions from customers regarding veal," says Palmer Steiner, an Ohio veal producer and chairman of the Veal Committee.

To answer their questions, a new checkoff-funded retail information brochure has been developed by the Veal Committee of the Beef Industry Council (BIC).

The brochure, Shedding Some Light On Veal: How To Respond To Consumer Questions About Veal, is designed to increase responsiveness to consumers about the food products they buy. This brochure puts the answers to those questions at their fingertips."

Also, a toll-free phone number has been established to allow retailers an opportunity to receive additional information they may need to answer questions from their customers.

The brochure also includes two handouts that can easily be reproduced and distributed. The first, Did You Hear The Good Nutritional News About Veal?, includes nutrient data and bar graphs illustrating the high protein and low-fat/low-calorie story veal has to tell. The second handout is an updated version of The Truth About Veal.

1991 BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best - In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster

Trade Delegation Builds Up U.S. Share In Japan Beef Market

TOKYO — Now that Japan scheduled to eliminate beef import quotas recently, a 70-member trade delegation led by the U.S. Meat Export Federation (MEF) reported that Japanese consumption of imported beef should nearly double by the year 2000.

Philip Seng, MEF's president and chief executive officer, said the broad-based trade delegation consisting of livestock producers, packers, and feed grain growers has been pleased with its reception this week in Japan.

The group has been building Japan's appetite for U.S. beef through seminars, trade shows, and cooking promotions, and by meeting with industry and government officials.

"We're convinced the Japanese market will grow by at least 50 percent and probably double over the next 10 years to more than one million metric tons of imported beef," Seng said. "It appears the U.S. is very well positioned to capitalize on the growing Japanese import beef market."

In the wake of intense negotiations with the U.S., Japan began easing beef import quotas in 1988. Japan also will begin ratcheting down market-stabilizing tariffs by 10 percent a year beginning in 1991. The 1991 tariff has been set at 70 percent.

MEF's chairman, Wayne Walter, stressed the importance of the Japanese market by pointing out nearly 70 percent of U.S. beef exports are channeled to Japan. U.S. beef and veal exports to Japan have skyrocketed from $150 million to more than $1.2 billion since 1980.

Jim Mullins, MEF secretary/treasurer and vice chairman of the Cattlemen's Beef Board's foreign trade committee, said support from state feed grain groups and the national beef checkoff have been critical in the campaign to boost sales to Japan.

"The cattle industry has looked toward this day for years," Mullins said as the delegation concluded its week-long visit here. "We came here to demonstrate our commitment to this growing marketplace and are extremely pleased with our reception."

Because of limited supplies and high prices stemming from import quotas, an estimated two-thirds of Japan's 127 million consumers have never eaten imported beef. Japanese per capita beef consumption has never exceeded 14 pounds annually, less than one-fifth the U.S. average.

Although Japan's market is opening up, Seng said competition is stiffening as Australia vies with the U.S. for the expanding market. The U.S. has 55 percent of the Japanese market by value and Australia ranks second with 41 percent. The positions are almost reversed when it comes to volume.

Seng said Australia already this year has spent more than $6 million in promotional funds even though Japan's trade barriers recently came down. Australia reportedly has earmarked $18 million to promote its beef products this year in Japan.

"We won't be able to match them on beef promotional dollars this year," Seng said. "But we've got many things going for us, including a higher-quality product and our strong relationships with the trade. The U.S. is positioned very favorably in Japan. That's why we have been working all these years to liberalize the Japanese market."

Walter said other U.S. advantages include consistent high-quality supplies, name recognition, superior animal breeding, and the ability to provide specialized cuts. He said the trade mission underscored the U.S. commitment to produce high-quality, fresh, chilled beef for the Japanese market.

Wendy's Corn Oil Use Improves Market

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Fast-food giant Wendy's announced at the Corn Classic, the annual meeting of the National Corn Growers Association, that it is beginning a year-long nutritional campaign featuring corn oil.

More than 1,700 people attended the Corn Classic in Kansas City at which Wendy's made its announcement.

Dave Thomas, founder and senior chairman of Wendy's, made the announcement with a special videotaped appearance during the Classic's general session.

The decision to use corn oil to cook its french fries exclusively in corn oil will create a demand for more than 23 million pounds of corn oil or 13 million bushels each year, according to John Campen, director of market development for NCGA.

NCGA has more than 25,000 members in 45 states and 23 affiliated state organizations.

NCGA representatives and grower members worked extensively with Wendy's, the Ohio Corn Marketing Program, and the Minnesota Corn Research and Promotion Council to develop a logo featuring corn oil which will be used on all of Wendy's promotional and informational items about the new program. This includes 10 million tray liners and one million nutritional brochures and menu boards in each of Wendy's more than 3,600 outlets.

"This increased use of corn oil exemplifies the gains that are possible for products made from corn," Campen said. "Wendy's is to be commended for its recognition of corn oil's high nutritional value, good taste, and low level of saturated fat."

Atlantic Breeders Names Sales Performance Winners

LANCASTER, (Lancaster Co.) — Several Atlantic Breeders Cooperative sales and service personnel recently received high recognition for their outstanding performance during 1990.

The recognitions were announced by Gary Heckman, Atlantic's member sales director, and received special awards and prizes. Presented at recent regional sales meetings.

This program encourages and recognizes achievements which improve service and increase sales volume. Performance evaluation categories include sales/service volume, sire usage, conception rate, and product knowledge.

Highest award winner among Atlantic's 66 professional unit technicians was Milton Smithers of Centerville, Crawford County. He ranked especially high in unit sales, usage of top sires, and effective application of genetics recommended through Atlantic's mating programs.

First runner-up technician was Pat Arnold of Myerstown, serving Unit 9 in the eastern Lebanon-western Berks area, followed by Jeffrey Peifer, Lititz, in Unit 17 of northern Lancaster County.

Among Atlantic's region managers, David Zimmerman of New Holland was the leader. His East Region includes all Pennsylvania counties east of the Susquehanna River plus York County, Delaware State, and parts of Maryland and New Jersey.

LEADERSHIP AT WORK

Perry Co. Holstein Club Meets

NEW BLOOMFIELD (Perry Co.) — The Perry County Holstein Club recently held its annual banquet and meeting at the Centre Presbyterian Church, Loysville. The evening's events also included the crowning of the 1991-1992 Perry County Dairy Princess and the honoring of outstanding 4-H dairy club members.

During the business meeting, Brian Fleisher, Newport was re-elected to the board and George Rice was elected to the board of directors. Logan Bower discussed the new initiative by the state office to reach individuals involved in dairy farming or the dairy service industry between the ages of 18 and 40. Called the "Young Dairymen's Club" the program is designed to provide educational, social and leadership opportunities for the targeted group. State Director Ray McMillen brought greetings from the state association and updated the group on merchandising and program information.

Following the business meeting, Jennifer Hummel, Duncannon, was crowned as the new Perry County Dairy Princess. Bestowing the honor was Mary Innerst, Ickesburg, the 1990-1991 Perry County Dairy Princess. In her farewell address, Innerst reflected upon her reign and the many activities and opportunities she had to promote dairy products and foster understanding between farm and non-farm folk. Hummel, a student at Susquenita High School and member of the 4-H dairy club, spoke of her excitement to begin work as dairy princess. Hummel served this past year in the dairy ambassador program.

Several 4-H dairy club members were honored for excellent work in completing their project books. The senior award winners were Colleen Kretzing, first place and Liza Haas, second place. The junior award winners were Heather Hertzler, first place and Keith Leber, second place.

The club presented a plaque of appreciation to Jane Benner, Millerstown, for her many years of service to the junior program in Perry County. Benner was also recognized for her efforts in establishing a county milk promotion and milkshake stand.

Feed Grains Council Expands Overseas Operations

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Feed Grains Council (USFGC) is establishing two new overseas positions in 1991 to meet expanding market opportunities for U.S. corn, sorghum, and barley.

The council will open a southeast Asia regional office in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, and position a new director in Vienna, Austria, to handle an expanded contact base in Eastern Europe.

Michael Callahan will assume the position of USFGC regional director for Southeast Asia. Callahan will coordinate technical and trade servicing market expansion programs in Malaysia, Indonesia, and the Philippines from the USFGC office in Ruala Lumpur.

Callahan has been the USFGC director of international operations for Asia, responsible for administration, program planning, and analysis for all USFGC programs in Asia. He holds a master's of science degree in agriculture from Texas A&M University.

Callahan has worked with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations and the U.S. Peace Corps.

The rapidly changing political and economic climate of the USSR and Eastern Europe created a need for more staff in the region. Richard Vogen will remain USFGC country director for the Soviet Union. Christopher S. Corry will assume the responsibilities of the regional director for Eastern Europe. Corry will be located in the Council's Vienna, Austria office.

As regional director, Corry will administer the council's market development and expansion programs in Eastern Europe, as well as monitor agricultural and trade activities in the region.

Corry is currently the USFGC regional director for North Africa. He joined the council in 1987 as a technical coordinator, responsible for assisting the council's development and implementation of technical livestock, feed, and grain processing and market development programs.

Corry holds a master's of science degree in agriculture from Texas A&M University. Prior to joining the council, Corry was a vocational agriculture instructor. He also served in the U.S. Peace Corps in Sierra Leone, West Africa.

PSEUDORABIES UPDATE

A series to update hog producers on the Pennsylvania Pseudorabies Eradication Program.

WHY PENNSYLVANIA NEEDS A PRV CONTROL PROGRAM

Abe Fisher
Chairman
Pennsylvania Pork Producers' Council
PRV Technical Committee

Pennsylvania is a significant part of the U.S. pork industry, and producers in the U.S. have determined that PRV is a disease that they do not want to live with forever.

Through representation at the NPPC delegate session, U.S. pork producers have set the goal to eliminate PRV from the U.S. by the year 2000.

The tools, such as gene-deleted vaccine, are now available to eradicate PRV from the U.S. without eradicating the producer, and many states are progressing rapidly to control PRV.

Pennsylvania's latecoming control program at the present time is lagging behind the rest of the U.S., and our lack of progress is being observed by the National PRV Control Committee and by other states. Our neighboring states would like Pennsylvania to control PRV so that their swine herds do not become infected with PRV from nearby swine herds in Pennsylvania.

Ultimately, we need a PRV control program so that when other states have eliminated PRV, we are not singled out and restricted from shipping pigs interstate toward the end of the national PRV cleanup program.

Secondly, we need a PRV control program for the financial benefit of all pork producers in Pennsylvania. PRV extracts a high cost to live with in a swine herd, through decreased reproductive efficiency, poor finisher performance, and greater than usual losses in the farrowing house.

Producers who do not have PRV do not want to incur those types of losses because of PRV. We need a Pennsylvania PRV control program in order to keep the total Pennsylvania swine industry efficient, and we can help do that by stopping the spread of and eventually the losses caused by PRV.

In order to control the spread of PRV for the benefit of the total Pennsylvania swine industry, individual producers must make decisions, and some of those will be very difficult, and some will affect more than just their operation. PRV is an industry problem, but individual producers make up the industry.

Pa. Fair Premiums Exceed $7,300

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — Agriculture comes to the city, as the Pennsylvania Fair opens its gates on May 16, 1991 at the Philadelphia Park Racetrack in Bensalem, Pa.

The fair hosts nearly 500,000 consumers each year. The Pennsylvania Fair is currently seeking entries for all livestock, home and garden classes and other miscellaneous contests.

The livestock departments consist of a Beef Cattle Show that includes a beef heifer class featuring Angus, Polled Herefords, and Simmentals. The market steer class is open to purebred and crossbred steers. The top seven places, in a class, will divide a premium purse of $190, with the first place winner receiving $50.

The Sheep Show is an open show that features the following breeds: Cheviot, Columbia, Dorset, Hampshire, Shropshire, Southdown, Suffolk, and Oxfords. The top five places in each class in the Sheep Show will split a purse of almost $70, with the first place winner receiving $20.

The 4-H Dairy Goat Show is sanctioned by the American Dairy Goat Association. The following breeds are sanctioned for this show: Alpine, Nubian, Toggenburg, and all other purebreds and grades. The top five winners in each class win share a premium totaling more than $50. The first place winners will receive $15.

The Pennsylvania Fair, in its fifth year, will be focusing on agricultural education, and relating the importance of agriculture to consumers. For registration information and a premium book, contact Lolly Lesher, (215) 488-9160.

POULTRY ENVIRONMENTAL HOUSING SYSTEMS

Dennis E. Buffington
Professor and Head
Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department, PSU

The ever-increasing competitiveness of the poultry business has increased the need for environmental modification systems for poultry houses to produce meat and eggs more economically.

The need for environmental modifications of structures has also increased as more poultry producers are using high-density confinement houses. Today, environmental modifications are a major factor in determining whether a poultry farmer realizes a profit or loss.

The three influential factors in poultry production are nutrition, disease, and environment. These three factors are not isolated factors, but rather interacting factors. It is the combined effects of these three factors that influence how closely an animal produces to its genetic potential.

The environmental factor is the combined effect of climatic environment, structural environment, and social environment. The climatic environment refers to the microenvironment surrounding the animal, which includes the temperature, humidity, pressure, gaseous environment, ventilation, light, and noise. The structural environment refers to the materials with which the birds have contact, including wall construction materials, floor, litter, feeding equipment, watering equipment, and cage materials.

Factors such as bird density, number of birds per cage, size variation of birds in a given group, etc. all contribute to the social environment. Again, please note that the climatic, structural, and social factors all interact to create the environmental complex.

For modern control technology to be applied to modifying the environment in any animal housing unit, the structure and its environmental control systems must be properly designed, constructed, operated, and maintained.

The engineering design considerations that must be evaluated for a poultry structure include 1) type of structure (gable-roofed, flat-roofed, high-rise, etc.); 2) length/width/height relationships; 3) building orientation; 4) construction materials; 5) environmental control systems used within the structure; 6) materials handling systems; and 7) waste management system.

All of the structural design considerations will influence the efficiency of an environmental housing system. In addition, after the structure itself has been designed, it is imperative to design the environmental system within the structure.

The pertinent design considerations for environmental systems include 1) bird density; 2) bird weight; 3) management style; 4) air distribution; 5) ventilation system characteristics; and 6) heating and/or cooling system operating characteristics.

Economic analysis will dictate what type of environmental housing systems are feasible. In making such economic analysis, it must be stressed that environmental housing systems as they exist today can and will be improved as more engineering inputs are devoted to poultry housing.

Little Livestock Expo Set

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The 74th Little International Livestock Exposition will be held Saturday, April 20, beginning at 8 a.m. at Penn State's Ag Arena, across from Beaver Stadium at University Park. The free event is sponsored by the Block and Bridle Club.

The event, nicknamed the "Little I" by Penn Staters, gives students a chance to compete for awards and display their skills at grooming, preparing, and showing beef cattle, sheep, swine, and horses. All the animals in the show are from livestock herds maintained at Penn State.

Little I competition emphasizes the quality of student showmanship rather than the animals themselves. Six weeks before the show, students select their animals through a lottery. They spend evenings and weekends with university herdsmen and species superintendents, preparing their animals and practicing for competition.

"This friendly competition is the culmination of their efforts, and it's a chance for students to get recognition for all their hard work," said show manager Barry Sands, a senior majoring in dairy and animal science. A native of Montrose in Susquehanna Co., Barry has been active in the Little I since arriving at University Park in 1989.

This year's Little I is dedicated to Keith Bryan, instructor in dairy and animal science, in recognition of his outstanding service to the Block and Bridle Club and other student activities.

All judges for this year's competition are Penn State alumni and former Block and Bridle Club members. Robert Livingston, manager of a purebred Angus herd in York County, will judge the beef category. He is a former Little I show manager and lived and worked in the university barns during his studies at Penn State.

Alan Wright, who works for Agway in Linwood, N.Y., will serve as swine judge. Wright also was a live-in barn worker and Little I show manager during his Penn State career. Theresa Musser, project assistant in the agronomy department at Penn State, will be the horse judge. Gerald McCarmon, associate extension agent with Penn State Cooperative Extension in Cambria Co., will be the sheep judge.

An awards banquet for Little I participants will be held at 6 p.m. at the State College Knights of Columbus. Tickets for the banquet cost $13 and are available from Lu Ann Weatherholtz, Department of Dairy and Animal Science, 318 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-3664.

Simmental Bull Sets Record

STATE COLLEGE (Center Co.) — The C & B Incumbent son owned by Laural Valley Farms has set a new test station record for average daily gain through Pennsylvania's official 112-day testing program.

This moderately-framed bull that carries a great deal of thickness would be ideally suited for use by a wide variety of cattle producers, according to Glenn Eberly, director of the Meat Animal Evaluation Center. The Simmental bull set the record with a 5.51 pounds day gain and a ration of 134 pounds.

"This eye-appealing, structurally-correct bull has high growth rate EPDs with low birth weight EPDs. This combination is relatively rare and in much demand," said Eberly.

Meeting Defines Pork Research Priorities

CHICAGO, IL — Pork producers adjusted human nutrition and product technology development research priorities to synch with the changing marketplace and consumer demands, reported pork producer Sharon Schwartz, Washington, Kan., chair of the Research Committee during the Pork Industry Group Annual Meeting here March 23.

The four human nutrition research priority areas are pork's nutrient composition; meat's nutritional role in the normal diet; nutrient interaction and bioavailability; and diet health issues. This last area calls for research to more directly answer questions about meat and cancer and heart disease, said Schwartz.

Low fat product technology was identified as the top priority in the product technology development area. Other priorities are product quality (such as shelf life, flavor enhancement, and PSE); byproduct value enhancement (for example, alternative uses for pork fat); and food safety.

In other news, the Pork Industry Group is beginning two new advertising campaigns centered on the Pork Market Basket Study findings, one campaign for dietitians and the other for physicians. The physician campaign marks the pork industry's re-entrance into this area after almost a decade.

Chip Ray, Gobles, Mich., was elected Pork Industry Group chairman. Larry Larson, Sargeant, Minn., was elected vice chairman; and Margaret Ledger, Washington, Iowa, and Jim Hauge, Leith, N.D., were named to the executive committee. New directors seated at the meeting, elected at Pork Forum, are Lois Duxbury, S.D.; Dennis Dohrman, MO; Carroll Schultz, Ohio; and Linda Barnes, National Pork Council Women.

Handcraft Unlimited presents the Spring Craft Show of Intercourse, Saturday, April 27, from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. and Sunday, April 28 from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m. at the Martin Sales Building in Intercourse. Located two miles east of Intercourse on Rt. 340 - inside the Martin Sales Building.

Forage Seminar Held

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.)— The Cumberland Valley Co-Op (CVC) and Young's Minerals held a special forage seminar at CVC's main office here on March 19.

Mike Galbraith, forage and preservative specialist for Young's, chaired the meeting.

This seminar involved operators that store forages in a horizontal manner, such as ag bag, trench, or piling. The agenda included proper techniques and procedures of ensiling haylage, ryelage, small grainlage, and corn silage, with economic proof of savings by using preservatives.

Jan Kloesmeyer, CVC feed specialist, and James Marshall, Young's regional manager, were also involved in this educational session.

Tumbling Action Integral To Feed Mixer

The new Patz mixer features a rotating drum with unique double-circulation mixing. The central spiral circulator mixes feed with a tumbling action as it moves feed to the rear of the mixer. At the same time, the fliting on the drum continues the tumble mixing as the spiral fliting moves feed to the front of the mixer.

This efficient feed flow eliminates reversing auger direction, no auger drive, no auger bearings to wear out, and no friction drives or clutches. There is no auger housing to plug up, rust out, wear out, or allow buildup of moldy feed.

The Patz mixer is designed with few working parts for simplicity of operation and for minimum maintenance. There are only three grease fittings on the entire mixer.

A heavy main shaft in a large, greasable, self-aligning pillow block bearing supports the rear of the mixer. There are no bearings inside the drum. The front of the drum is supported by two steel wheels on greasable tapered roller bearings.

A gearbox drives a roller chain to turn the drum. A spring and a hydraulic dampener cushion the shock of motor start up. Moveable arms with idler sprockets provide automatic roller chain tightening.

The mixer drum panels and end discs are made with long-life Corten® steel.

The Patz mixer is designed to be assembled on site. The drum is assembled using bolted panels. This allows all parts of even the largest mixer to pass through a standard door and be assembled under an eight-foot ceiling. Depending on size of mixer, drum length is 4½, 6½, 8½, or 10½ feet.

Two types of scales are available. Choose from the simplicity of a mechanical beam scale to the fully programmable electronic scale with printer. The electronic scales include a five-year warranty.

Contracts Awarded For Addition To Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — General Services Secretary David L. Jannetta recently announced that $3.3 million in contracts have been awarded for the construction of a new Livestock Exhibition Hall at the State Farm Show Complex.

Jannetta said construction on the 82,440 square foot, two-story addition will begin this spring, with completion scheduled for summer 1993.

The new exhibition hall will be located south of the Large Arena next to the East and North buildings of the 14-acre Farm Show Complex.

Jannetta said the additional space is needed for the Farm Show — Pennsylvania's version of a state fair — and the growing number of events that depend on this special state facility.

"The Pennsylvania State Farm Show and 63 other events held each year in the Farm Show Complex have a substantial impact on central Pennsylvania's economy," Jannetta said. "One study indicates that the Farm Show alone generates more than $7.6 million in economic activity in Dauphin and neighboring counties."

Animal Health Product Regulators Ensure Food Safety

ALEXANDRIA, VA — Federal regulators responsible for animal health products used in food production do a good job of ensuring the safety of America's meat, milk and eggs, said scientists familiar with the drug approval process.

Three government agencies oversee the approval of animal health products — the pharmaceuticals, vaccines, and feed additives used in modern food production. The Food and Drug Administration, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and the Environmental Protection Agency conduct and review comprehensive tests. In addition, new compounds for enhancing the nation's food supply undergo rigorous tests by product manufacturers.

"Companies always address safety concerns in-house before a product ever gets to the approval level," said Floyd M. Byers, Ph.D., a professor in the department of animal sciences at Texas A&M University. "But the people at FDA also dot their i's and cross their t's. They have trained scientists on all levels — toxicology, immunology — to evaluate potential new compounds, and they do a very thorough job," he said. "There's no screening or approval process in the world that's even close to ours."

Before an animal health product is released for sale in the United States, federal agencies analyze its use and efficacy in the animal, ensuring its safety when the product is used according to label directions. Additional required tests, often conducted not only by manufacturers but also by government scientists, ensure that the product poses no risk to people consuming meat, milk, or eggs from animals receiving the product.

John G. Babish, Ph.D., a professor in the department of pharmacology at Cornell University's Veterinary College, has studied the effects and properties of animal drugs for 12 years and vouches that the regulatory system is reliable.

"Through personal experience, I've found the process to be very thorough, very prudent," Dr. Babish said. "I have no reservations about the safety of approved animal health products, and I know the kind of guidelines manufacturers and regulators follow to assure food safety. With regulation and legislation in place, I think manufacturers and the government do an excellent job of ensuring food quality."

And despite false fears raised by some activist organizations who advocate "natural" or "organic" products, experts said the meat, milk, and egg supply is enhanced by the use of animal health products.

"There's a lot of concern that's been expressed about the safety, wholesomeness, and environmental sensitivity of our food production systems," said Dr. Byers. "But scientifically speaking, we could not produce food to feed our current population without animal health products. It would take greater resources than we have available."

Solanco Young Farmers Present Awards

Mark Welk, Quarryville, was recognized as the Outstanding Young Farmer under 30, and Carl Kreider, Quarryville, was selected as the winner in the over-30 category.

The active member award was awarded to Ed Zug, Peach Bottom. Ed has been active as a chapter officer for 10 years and recently completed a term as a state officer.

This year's appreciation award was presented to Wilmer Nissley, Mount Joy, for his contributions and support of the Young Farmer program. Nissley has worked closely with the chapter for the past four years in weighing the yields from their hybrid corn test plot. Nissley received an engraved plaque in appreciation of his dedication.

The following corn awards were presented to winners in the annual corn production contest: R. Edwin Harnish, Christiana, produced 171 bushels of shelled corn per acre to win the grain division. Richard Brennemen, Quarryville, was second with 166 bushels, and A. Dale Herr, Kirkwood, was third with 159 bushels per acre. Herr also received the award for the highest grain yield average for the past three years with 169.4 bushels.

In the corn silage division, Karl Herr, Kirkwood, placed first with 27.4 tons per acre of 65 percent moisture corn silage. Dwayne Pelfer, Kirkwood, was second with 26.9 tons per acre and Larry Aaron, Quarryville, placed third with 26.4 tons per acre. Ed Zug, Peach Bottom, received the trophy for the highest silage yield average for the past three years with 25.3 tons per acre.

The following dairy production awards were presented. Richard Brenneman, Quarryville, received the top Holstein herd award with 21,054 pounds of milk and 779 pounds of fat. George Nickle, Quarryville, had the high Holstein cow for fat with 1,144 pounds. A cow owned by Robert Peifer, Kirkwood, produced 28,330 pounds of milk to earn the award for the high cow for milk production.

J. Marvin Herr's Holtwood herd of Jerseys took top honors for the breed with 12,860 pounds of milk and 635 pounds of fat. His cow was also high in milk production with 17,529 pounds. Another cow owned by Herr topped the butterfat production of the Jersey's with 850 pounds.

Lindenhof Farm, Oxford, owned by Axel Linde and Millie Widmann, received the award for the high Guernsey herd with 16,554 pounds of milk and 747 pounds of fat. Lindenhof Farm also had the high cow for milk with 25,058 pounds and the high cow for fat with 1,112 pounds.

The most improved herd for milk production was the Holstein herd of Richard Brenneman. The milk production increased 3,573 pounds this year as compared to last year and butterfat was up 108 pounds.

Intestine Feeding Big Topic Of Barn Seminar

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — F.M. Brown's Sons, Inc. recently concluded a series of barn seminars for customers and friends, attended by more than 175 dairymen representing 130 dairy operations.

Dr. Carl Brown, sales manager, set the stage for the meeting by presenting a summary of why we need to look at more than just feeding the rumen.

"In today's dairy industry, we are competing against some very efficient animals such as the turkey, hog, and even the fish," Brown said. "Research has done much to maximize rumen efficiency. The dairy industry must always maximize forage digestion to be efficient, but the digestion process includes large areas past the rumen."

Other species ferment, digest, and harvest all their nutrients in the intestine, but until recently this area was almost ignored by dairy research, he said. "Today we realize that once we maximize rumen efficiency we must look to feeds that improve nutrient harvest in the intestinal area."

Dr. Walter Kennett, Brown's nutritionist, followed with a discussion of why achieving peak milk yield is critical. In a cow milking 50 pounds of milk, maintenance requirements account for 36 percent of the total energy consumed. In a cow milking 100 pounds of milk, maintenance only consumes 22 percent of the total energy, allowing the conversion of 78 percent of energy consumed to productive purposes.

Body fill is one of two major factors which affect energy intake. He then reviewed how certain components of plant cells increase fill and thus reduce energy digestion. Products such as sodium bicarbonate and yeast culture enhance rumen energy digestion offsetting problems associated with higher fiber intake and low rumen pH.

"Once forage intake and digestion is maximized, then we need to combine nutrients flowing out of the rumen with nutrients which bypass the rumen digestive process to allow the optimum genetic potential of the cow to express itself," he said. Depending on quality of forages, forage intake, ration balance, etc., rumen fermentation will support 60 to 80 pounds of milk.

In addition, cows can consume "fat-added" diets and use body fat stores to provide energy for much higher peak lactation yields.

Protein, and specifically amino acids which build milk and body protein, then become the limiting factor in maximum performance. Based on real feeding situations, Kennett then showed how investing in the right forms of rumen undegradable protein would yield handsome returns under todays feed prices.

Following Kennett was Alan Larsen, eastern regional sales manager for Bio-Techniques Lab Inc. Cobactin, a product manufactured and patented by Bio Techniques, is part of this next generation of pro-

Lamb Marketing Alternatives Topic Of Meeting

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Sheep producers from 13 counties in Pennsylvania gathered recently to consider alternatives to the marketing of lambs.

Jim Sheeder provided information of two groups of sheep producers forming a cooperative to market their lambs, the "Yankee Shepherd Coop," Vermont and the "New York Lamb Coop," New York State. Each cooperative, Sheeder said, is enjoying better than average lambs prices and also insuring their customers a steady supply of quality lambs.

Several fact sheets and other printed information about cooperatives were given to all attendees. Bob Harris, a marketing specialist, made comments on the formation and functions of the "New York Lamb Coop." Bill Blake, American Sheep Industry representative, explained the role of ASI marketing concepts, and gave examples as meeting with grocery chains and food industry groups with demonstrations of new cuts of lamb and suggestions for preparation.

At the conclusion of the speakers' addresses, Sheeder opened the floor for suggestions and comments from the sheep producers. Dr. Clair Engle suggested that one geographic section of Pennsylvania begin a lamb cooperative. Engle also said that record keeping could be assisted through the county extension offices with a computer base at Penn State.

The county extension offices provided greater access to most sheep producers, and should a State Lamb Cooperative evolve, the extension offices would be a cohesive link throughout.

The conclusion of the meeting about 2:30 p.m. resolved the following: a group of sheep producers in southwestern Pennsylvania would organize to form a loose lamb cooperative. They would establish their goals, write rules and regulations for participating cooperative members, actively pursue markets for their products, and document their efforts. John Shoemaker, Ebensburg, Pa., a sheep producer, offered to coordinate the record keeping activities of this cooperative.

For additional information about this meeting and a Pennsylvania cooperative, contact Jim Sheeder, RD #3, Box 51, Somerset, PA 15501, (814) 443-3017.

ducts targeted at the small intestine of the dairy cow and fattening steer.

In a normal, healthy animal, an organism called Lacto-bacillus Acidophilus helps maintain microflora balance in the digestive tract. This organism digests starches which have escaped the rumen and abomasum, and have the ability to adhere to the intestinal lining.

"Daily addition of Cobactin to your feed supply is an excellent way to insure that sufficient lactobacillus organisms are present in the feed stuff to keep infusing the intestine," he said. Research work at several universities has shown an approximate three pound increase in milk yield.

Eric Scheib, seed division manager at F.M. Brown's, closed out the morning program with a discussion of corn silage research and optimum varieties and maturities at harvest. He also introduced customers to the various lines of alfalfa which Brown's carries and an overview of our other seed lines.

Following lunch, Dr. Carl Brown concluded the program by demonstrating the BEST Progesterone Assay Test, and discussing body condition coding. He stressed that body condition is a harvestable crop which must be managed.

Each point in condition from one to five provides enough energy to produce 1,200 to 1,500 pounds of milk.

Cows eating a single herd TMR must be managed differently than those in a tie stall barn receiving topdress. "While we do not want to see code 1 or 5 cows, a code 2 cow is not necessarily a problem if the energy lost as the cow dropped to the code 2 was harvested in the form of milk," he said. "Weight loss must be stabilized and reversed on cows by 60 or 70 days, however, if we wish to maintain a 13-month calving interval."

PLY-FOIL is a very efficient form of insulation. In application after application it has proven to be extremely effective at controlling heat gain/loss, thus significantly reducing heating and cooling costs. PLY-FOIL insulation uses an aluminum foil to reflect up to 97% of the radiant heat.

PLY-FOIL BENEFITS

PLY-FOIL products are clean, lightweight, and non-toxic; are unaffected by changes in humidity; do not shrink; and once installed require no maintenance. They do not promote the growth of fungi or bacteria, and provide no nesting support for rodent or insect pests. PLY-FOIL, which has a Class A/Class 1 fire rating, meets the fire and smoke safety requirements of most federal, state and local building codes.

DON'T BUY ANY TYPE OF INSULATION UNTIL YOU READ THIS IMPORTANT MESSAGE!

Now you can update and insulate your buildings with lifetime Pure Aluminum Foil Reflective Insulation. It has been designed for poultry and livestock buildings, metal buildings, hog farms, veal houses, horse and cattle barns, cold storage houses, egg rooms, etc. Why not have a cleaner and healthier environment and never have to reinsulate again. Our Pure Aluminum Foil Reflective Insulation will last forever.

Old style standard types of insulation merely slow down your heat loss and deteriorate rapidly. They were not designed for agricultural use. Our Pure Aluminum Foil Reflective Insulation stops your heat loss COLD and will last forever.

We have done business with many people (384 accounts) in the farming and agricultural business, and most of them all tell us the same thing. Whenever moisture or condensation strikes standard types of insulation they lose all of their "R" values, the rats and mice love it, it is very dangerous in a fire because of the toxic gases omitted and it just does not hold up very long. Our reflective aluminum foil insulation will last a lifetime and will continue to reflect heat back in the direction that it came, thereby keeping all buildings cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter.

Why keep throwing your hard earned money away on cheap and inferior types of insulation when you can buy the best for just a little bit more and never have to replace it again. Doesn't it make good sense to do the job right the first time and end your insulation problems once and for all?

WHY SHOULD YOU CONSIDER BUYING PURE ALUMINUM FOIL REFLECTIVE INSULATION:

1. It completely eliminates condensation in all metal buildings.
2. Specially coated outer surfaces can stand high pressure cleaning.
3. Resistant to stains, mildew, chemicals and animal waste.
4. Not affected by birds, vermin or rodents.
5. Very easy to install with a staple gun. Goes up easy.
6. It surpasses all building code requirements, is fire resistant, NFPA Class A, UBC Class I. Flame spread 25. Smoke density 15.
7. And much, much more.

This year, you need more than feed. You need good business ingredients.

With milk prices reaching an all time low, milking cows isn't your biggest expense. It's Feeding. In the months ahead, the right ration could make the difference between profit and loss.

At Pillsbury, we've got the feed ingredients and feeding know-how to keep your dairy business strong. Our complete line of dairy feeds — wet brewers grain, mineral mixes, milk replacers, and many more— can help you reduce feed costs, and still feed a nutritionally balanced ration to your herd.

Our feed consultants are experts in dairy feeds and nutrition. They can provide you with computerized ration formulation, forage sampling and nutrient testing. And, of course, all our products. For your dairy farm, these are good business ingredients. From Pillsbury

Grange Offers Voice For Farming

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture may have been the reason for founding the Grange nearly 125 years ago, but today Grange means much more than just farming.

The year was 1867 and the country was still recovering from the ravages of the Civil War, yet out of this destruction grew the foundation for an organization which still gives a voice to the farming and rural community and has developed to meet changing needs.

"The Grange has within it the flexibility to adapt to issues at hand," said William Ringler, state master (president) of the Pennsylvania State Grange. "The basic principles of morality and family, on which the organization was founded, are as applicable today as when the Grange was formed."

When the Grange was established in Pennsylvania in 1873, much of the state's population was directly involved in farming. Today only 1 percent of the state's population farms. The structure and broad base of the Grange gives us the insight and ability to meet these changes in our organization, Ringler said.

Bill Buffington, state overseer (vice president), has been a member of the Grange for more than 40 years. While not a farmer himself, his grandfather had a farm in Chester County.

Buffington sees the Grange continuing to promote agriculture but also becoming a stronger voice for rural and urban America.

"I've heard resource people — experts on rural lifestyles and trends — say the Grange is the only national organization in existence today that has the structure in place or has shown any interest in representing rural/urban communities," Buffington said.

"The Grange has always been concerned about all areas of rural life, including health, transportation, education, and conservation issues," said Brenda Shambaugh, Pennsylvania State Grange legislative director.

A big thrust of the Grange is legislation. Being a grassroots organization, Grange legislative policies start at the local level and work their way up to state and national Grange.

"My husband and I joined the Grange about 10 years ago because we needed legislative help," Dolly Stemer said. "They were the only ones who could help us."

Sterner, now a membership worker for the Pennsylvania State Grange, and her husband, John, are retired poultry farmers in the Gettysburg area.

Some of the legislation which the Grange has supported are nutrient management legislation, water quality and quantity protection, wetlands legislation protecting agricultural production, repair of rural roads and bridges, adequate milk pricing for dairy farmers, bottle bill legislation, and improved educational resources in rural areas.

If legislation doesn't interest you, the Grange has something else that will, Ringler said. The Grange has always been a progressive organization which promotes ·ıdual leadership for children, ı h and adults, both male and female. In fact, the Grange was the first organization to include women on an equal basis with men, with equal voting privileges, long before women had voting rights.

Community service is another important aspect of the Grange. Recycling, highway trash pickup, organizing blood banks, and rehabilitating community churches are a few of the activities which local Granges do. Deaf Activities, the Grange's national health project, serves thousands of deaf people by conducting hearing tests, sponsoring sign language classes, purchasing telecommunication devices for the deaf for hospitals and schools, and teaching how to protect hearing.

The Pennsylvania State Grange will be celebrating its heritage during Grange Week, April 21-27 with a banquet and afternoon workshops April 22, at the Holiday Inn, Grantville. For more information, call (717) 234-5001.

Northeast's 1990 Outstanding Tree Farmers

As the 1990 Outstanding Tree Farmers in the Northeast region, spreading good news about forest management is not a difficult task for Al and Eleanor Maass of New Milford, Pa. Their personal testimony about bringing their land from tatters to a thriving and healthy 300-acre tree farm has caused many to listen and become believers in the tree farm ethic of promoting good stewardship and multiple use among private landowners.

After 28 years of management, the Maass' now view tree farming as a way to cultivate the best possible trees with the best monetary rewards. One way the Maass' see a return on their investment is by making timber stand improvements to change composition and by intermittent harvesting to select the best trees for future crops. In addition, the couple obtains whatever money they can from the sale of maple syrup and firewood.

The Maass' have not always been concerned about the financial aspects of their tree farm. When they first considered purchasing the abandoned sheep farm, it was for recreational purposes. After they made the purchase, they began consulting the state forester a initiated and program of improvements. The land had previously served as a pasture for sheep and dairy cows and had changed hands many times, so their work was cut out for them.

Once improvement began and the couple became familiar with the tree farm program, they considered other options for their land. With nearly 300 acres to manage, part conifer and hybrid poplar and part hardwoods, it was important to the Maass' to consider the economic viability of their land.

But today, new tax laws are causing problems among private landowners. "The cost of operating a flourishing tree farm is getting expensive," said Eleanor, who is currently working closely with Pennsylvania forestry associations to promote export markets.

"I saw the difference right away!"

That's how Max Reapsome recalls his beginnings with Fertrell fertilizer - over 12 years ago! Starting with top dressing alfalfa, Max soon began using Fertrell fertilizers more widely. Here's why: "With Fertrell the quality of my feed is better. It allows my cows to get more nutrition out of the same amount of feed or less. Plus, my herbicide use has been reduced 30 to 40 percent and I haven't needed pesticides for over 8 years! And that saves me money."

Max Reapsome, Loysville, PA

Just ask for Fertrell representative to develop a personalized fertilizer plan for you. He'll analyze your soil's elements, your crops and growing conditions, and show you how to balance all three so you too can "see the difference right away!"

Fertrell.

Hereford Places High In Bull Performance

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Bedford County has been long known for quality dairy farming. And test results from the Pennsylvania Performance Bull Test at Penn State University show a climbing reputation in the Polled Herford division.

Placing first among 21 Polled Herefords in the 112-day test was Paul Slayton, who leases 1,500 acres of the Falkland Farms near Schellsburg.

Slayton has 100 head of pure bred Polled Herefords, 50 commercial, and 50 German Gelbviegh. The Gelbviegh are a project of Slayton's. Since January, the Slayton herds have produced 53 calves.

Slayton said he has been entering the competition for the past eight years and has always been very competitive but has never won before. "It has been a personal objective of mine," said the former manager of the "Polled Hereford World Magazine." The bull, named Turning Point, is the result of two Falkland Herefords and was raised on the Slayton farm.

Slayton moved to the Falkland Farm because "it always enjoyed an outstanding reputation," he said.

Slayton says he hasn't shown cattle for many years but has entered other bull tests in West Virginia and Wisconsin. "This is the best record we have had yet," he said.

He is a member of the Bedford County Cattleman's Association, the National Cattleman's Association, and a number of other Polled Hereford groups.

Placing fifth in the Penn State competition was Tawnya Wolfhope, a former Pennsylvania Polled Hereford Queen. It is the third year Tawnya has entered the competition. In other years, she placed fifth.

The mother, FLF Falkland, has produced all three Herefords for Tawnya, who is the daughter of Ed and Peg Wolfhope.

High Quality Wool Earmarked For Upcoming Sales

DENVER, Colo. — More than 2.5 million pounds of high-quality wool will be offered to domestic and foreign buyers at three upcoming sales sponsored by the United States Wool Marketing Association and the American Sheep Industry Association.

The USWMA is in charge of the sales while ASI will supply the wool prepared under its Wool Quality Improvement Program guidelines by producers nationwide.

The first sale will be held April 16 in San Angelo, Texas, where more than 360,000 pounds of wool will be offered. The second sale on April 30, will also be held in San Angelo — 425,000 pounds of wool will be up for sale. The third and final sale will be held on May 21 in Rapid City, S.D., and will offer the most wool of all — 470,000 to 490,000 pounds.

"Judging from the amount of inquiries we've received so far, we're expecting good attendance from both producers and buyers," said Joe Helle, chairman of ASI's Wool Council. Helle is pleased at the amount of interest, noting the joint program between ASI and USWMA is only in its second year. "We had a lot of feedback after the pilot program last year and not all of it was favorable," said Helle. "We recognize that last year's sale didn't bring the higher prices producers were hoping for but what they need to realize is that this was due to circumstances beyond our control."

Helle is referring to Australian floor prices that fell just days before last year's sale. This resulted in many of the participating producers not receiving the maximum potential for their higher-quality, well-prepared wool. "I think the majority of producers understand what happened," said Helle. "We still have a large following that is very committed to the program and understands the long-term importance of quality wool's competitiveness in a global market."

Helle said that unless producers have a top-quality wool to offer buyers this year, they may not have any takers for their product. "Quality is of paramount importance," said Helle. "And the Wool Quality Improvement Program helps provide producers with a more marketable product." The program's emphasis is on proper shearing and preparation techniques which results in the kind of wool warehouses and textile companies prefer over a lesser-quality product.

Wool prepared under the program's guidelines also got high marks after samples of it were used in combing trials. "The information we're getting back from the combing trails indicates that we have a superior product that's generating a lot of interest from domestic and foreign buyers alike," said Helle. "When we produce a product that gets this kind of response, you know we're on the right track."

Tilmon Receives National Extension Assignment

NEWARK, Del. — Dr. H. Donald Tilmon, University of Delaware Extension farm management specialist, will be working on a 50 percent time basis with the Cooperative Extension System/ U.S. Department of Agriculture. His appointment runs from March 1, 1991 through February 28, 1992.

During his assignment, Tilmon will lead a nationwide review, testing, and implementation of the USDA-developed Farm Decision Support System computer model PLANETOR. This model can be used by farmers to analyze the environmental impact of production practices including pesticides or fertilizer applications. It is also aimed at reducing dependence on off-farm resources. The program will be site-specific to state and regions that decide to use it.

Several year ago, Tilmon was involved in implementing another nationwide Extension computer program, FINPAK.

The Delaware Farm Management records-keeping program led by Tilmon will continue uninterrupted with the help of Garland Saville, an Extension associate. Saville has been hired to assist with the 25 participating farm families. This project was funded by the Delaware General Assembly in 1988.

GET THE EXTRA EDGE

Put a Vicon three-bladed disc mower through wet, tangled crops - even fire ant hills - and then compare the difference.

With almost double the number of cuts per minute over two-bladed disc competitors, and the extra suction created by Vicon's unique triangular discs, it's easy to see why Vicon CM disc mowers are the choice for fast, clean NO-PLUG performance.

And the price is right at $3,895.

The advantages of bottom delivery... without the high cost or complications

Uniform filling

Forage blown into the center of the silo through the fill chute (standard equipment) is distributed uniformly to the silo wall and compacted by the 16-in diameter auger. This gets more feed into a given silo, reducing storage cost per ton.

Whenever feed reaches the wall, an advance switch moves the auger forward clockwise a few inches for delivery and compaction of the next strip of feed.

If filling is interrupted, the auger "waits" for more forage to be delivered. This even distribution minimizes air pockets, center core and wall pressures, to retain feed value

As the silo is filled, the machine raises automatically as needed A steel cylinder, 30 in long and 19 in in diameter, is suspended under the center of the machine. This cylinder creates the center discharge hole in the middle of the silage as the machine is raised The Big Jim® system easily handles the nonstop filling capacity of big blowers, for fast, convenient, positive filling

Quick change-over

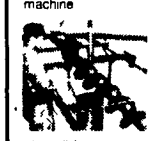
1. TURN UNIT OFF
To convert from filling to feeding (or vice versa) in minutes you climb only to silage level up a CLEAN CHUTE First turn the dial to "OFF" on the control panel located at the motor end of the machine This safety feature gives you control of the machine

3. OPEN TRAP DOOR
Unlatch door in the top of the steel hole forming cylinder and let the door hang down so silage can drop down the center hole into the bottom conveyor During filling the trap door is closed so forage does not fall into the unloading hole formed in the silage



2. SHIFT LEVER
Move lever handle toward the center discharge hole This forces the auger toward the silo wall for proper unloading especially for removal of frozen silage from the wall by the chipper wheel For filling move the shift lever handle toward the wall so the hole-former hangs straight

4. TURN TO FEED
Turn the dial to FEED to reverse the auger and you're ready to feed out in just minutes after filling Quick change over makes it easy to use your feeding system without interruption during silo-filling seasons And with a clean chute imagine not getting silage dust down your neck!

Fast feeding

Massive auger reverses to carry feed to the center hole. Feed pours through the open trap door in the hole-forming cylinder, and falls by gravity onto the double-chain conveyor housed in the concrete tunnel below. This unloading eliminates a blower and its power needs, so only a 7½ H.P. motor is needed for 20-ft. and 24-ft. silos, (30-ft. silos require a 10 H.P., 3-Phase motor) The big-capacity conveyor gives you the benefits of bottom discharge without the expense. Adaptable in height and distance, the conveyor can deliver directly into a mixer or into the conveyor of your feeding system. This system is unmatched for simplicity of design, ease of operation and fast feeding capacity in 20-ft , 24-ft. and 30-ft silos

"FORAGE, AS HAYLAGE, IS THE MOST ECONOMICAL, NUTRITIOUS AND PHYSIOLOGICALLY HEALTHY FEED THAT CAN BE FED TO THE DAIRY COW."

The combination of tower silos and haylage is ideal when supplying high quality rations to dairy cows.

THE TOWER SILO IS THE BEST STORAGE SYSTEM AVAILABLE TO TAKE FULL ADVANTAGE OF ALL THE BENEFITS THAT HAYLAGE OFFERS TO THE DAIRYMAN.

When possible, it is much more logical to take advantage of the vertical dimension of the tower silo when storing large tonnages of haylage than to spread the forage over large horizontal areas. Extensive horizontal areas used by bags and trenches are frequently too far away for an efficient operation. Tower silos properly located are readily accessible for filling and easily dispense haylage directly into mixing and feeding equipment for the dairy herd.

The poured concrete SOLLENBERGER SILO, either top or bottom unloading, with its solid 6" concrete wall, is the choice of dairymen who desire to have a system with low maintenance and the ability to keep their feed in the best possible condition. The solid concrete wall minimizes losses due to heat and oxygen; the two main culprits when it comes to storage losses.

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.
